It's a rough life-
sometimes yes . . .
sometimes no . . .
sometimes maybe . . .
Or perhaps all three, depending on the situation.

“The lesson is clear you cannot keep any group in subservience in a society which purports to be free without that group applying the standards and hopes of democracy to its own condition . . . the man who says, ‘The rule is right because I have the power to make it,’ is merely demonstrating his fear of applying standards and processes of human development to the rules which govern human behavior. That man is afraid to deal with people as people.”

A year to work to study
to achieve

This is the year of change. The year of diversity, rebellion, contrast. And though our university has long been labeled opathetic, it has also begun to show signs of response to the outside world.

Berkeley, Son Francisco Stote, and Colum-bio hove broken the barriers, to call for reforms, freedom, ond student rights. And a weak little voice has been heord beckoning the University of Maryland students to also rally forward. The results were —

The Annapolis Rally, an SGA sponsored trip to our state capitol to plead for more funds for the University after Governor Agnew had cut educational spending. Various campus organizations have also demonstrated their concern – The BSU actively protested a Home Economics experimental study which barred blocks from participating; the Greeks have become aware of the necessity for change and developed an integration committee to work toward a solution of its most pressing problem.

Unfortunately, the greatest turnout was not for civil rights or higher education or even improved cafeteria conditions. A few bare behinds provoked a mob of thousands to spread across the campus clamoring for panties, bras, and more nude runners.

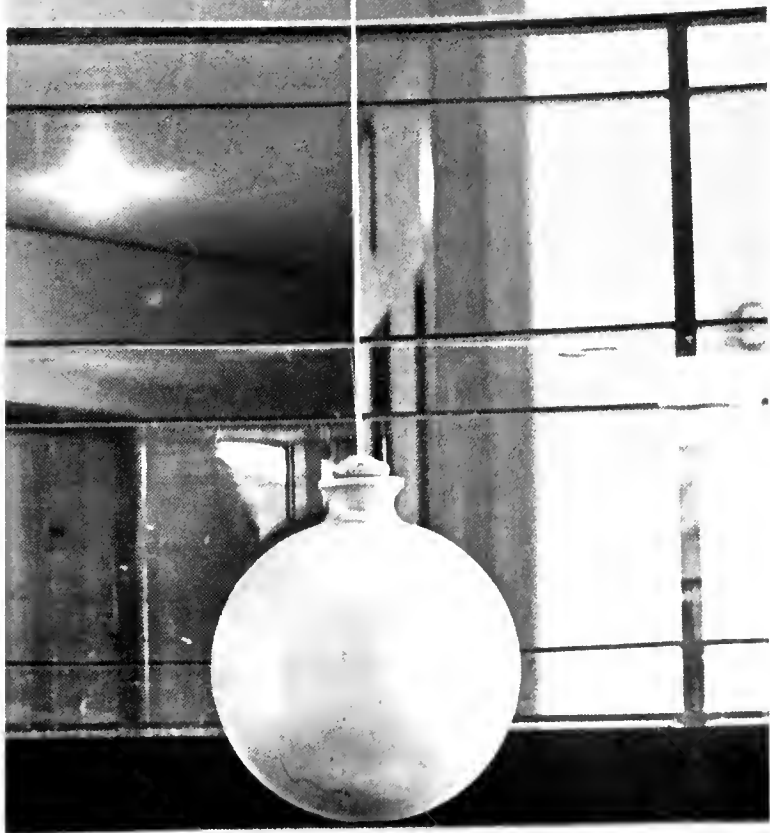

Just look around though, and take note of what you see. There is conservatism—Georgian architecture . . . blue suits and white shirts . . . no drinking on campus . . . no smoking in class . . . and of course, none of that dirty sex. The administration has maintained its “in loco parentis” position, and still many, too many, accept it unquestionably. To some this is ultraconservatism—to others, it is stability, tradition, heritage. And in this respect “conservatism” is good. Perhaps some foundation of stability or continuity is necessary even in a changing world—to quell violence or confusion, or possibly, to initiate it.

Yes, there is conservatism and the conservative.

And then there's the hippie.

Somehow the influences always seem to balance out, or better yet, blend together. The hippie is not just limited to students. Maybe there's a little hippie in all of us.

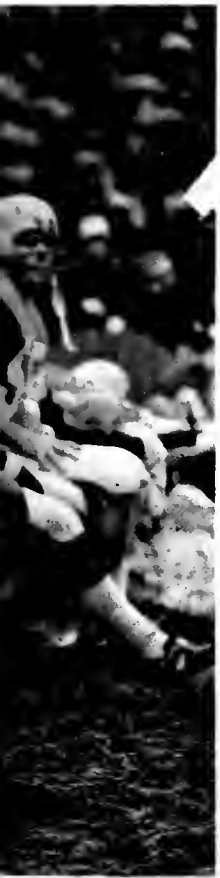

Fall brings football and with it the excitement of every game—win or lose.

For Terp fans, some Saturday afternoons bring good memories. Some others bring bad memories . . .

And a few bring no memories at all.

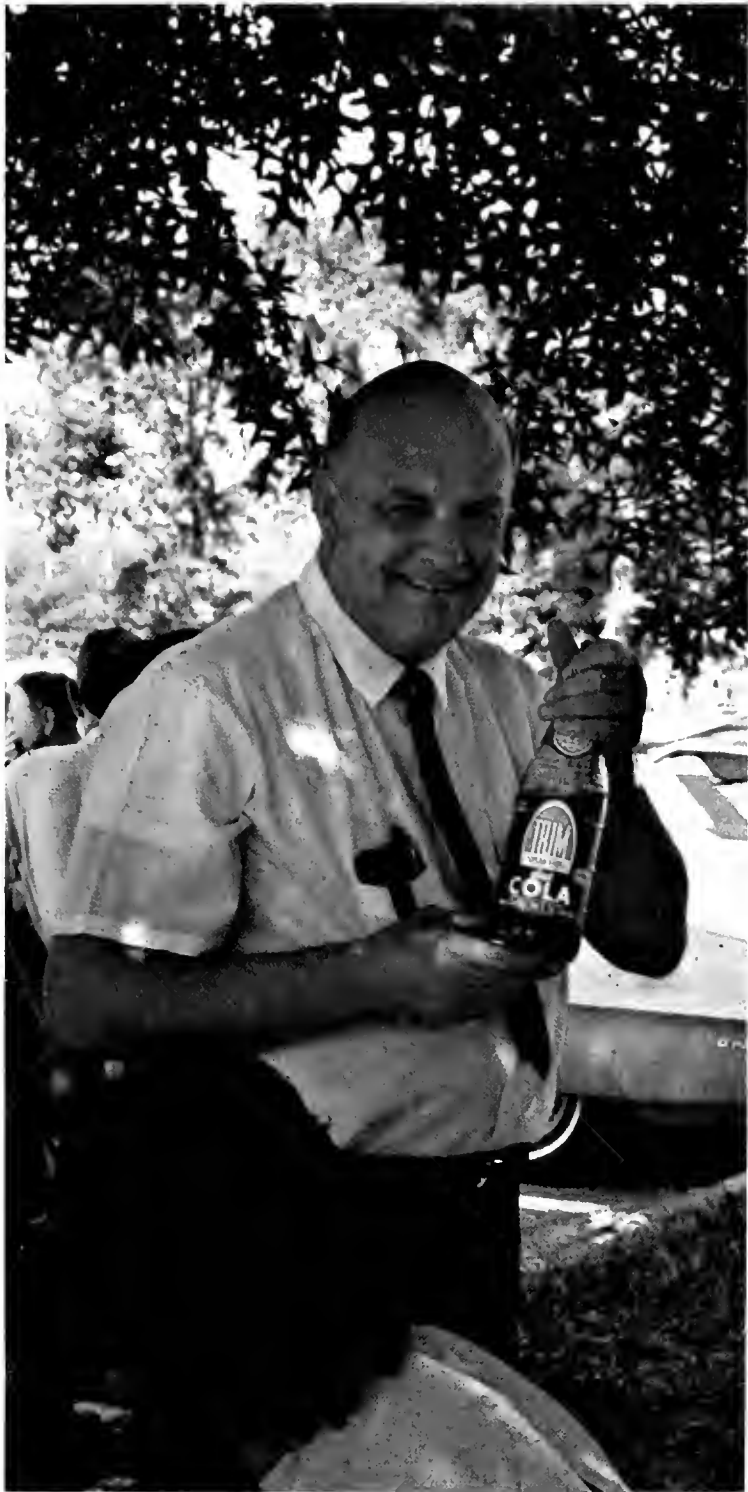

But regardless, the spirit, enthusiasm and good times are always there — though the goal posts sometimes aren't.

The school goes all out in welcoming the returning alumni for Homecoming. Decorations, floats, parties, buffets, class reunions, and best of all—a gridiron victory this year. Maybe it's things like this that keep alumni coming back. Or maybe it's just getting together with a few close buddies at the car bar.

Everyone campaigned for his own "thing".

Opportunities unlimited.

Whether it's sports or doredevil groups or intellectual organizations, there's o niche. Everyone con find his own or just enjoy looking.

It's not as cold as it seems.

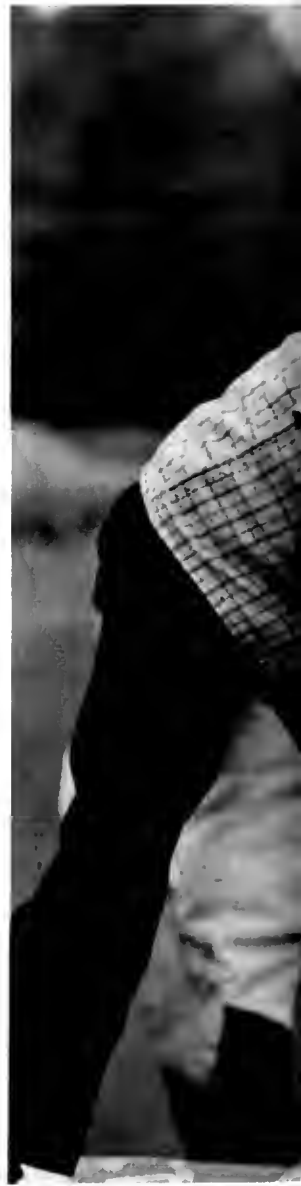

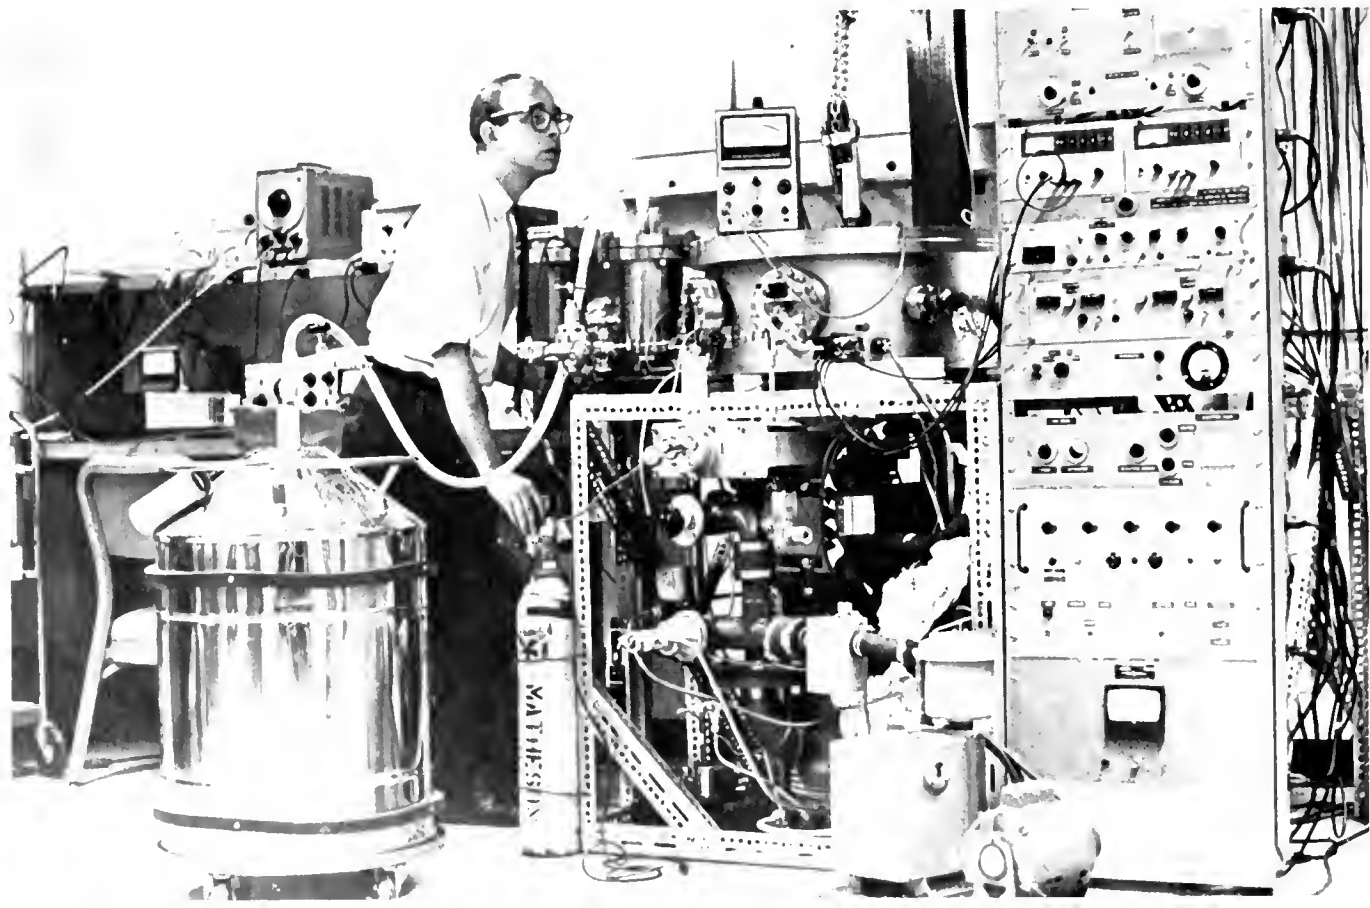

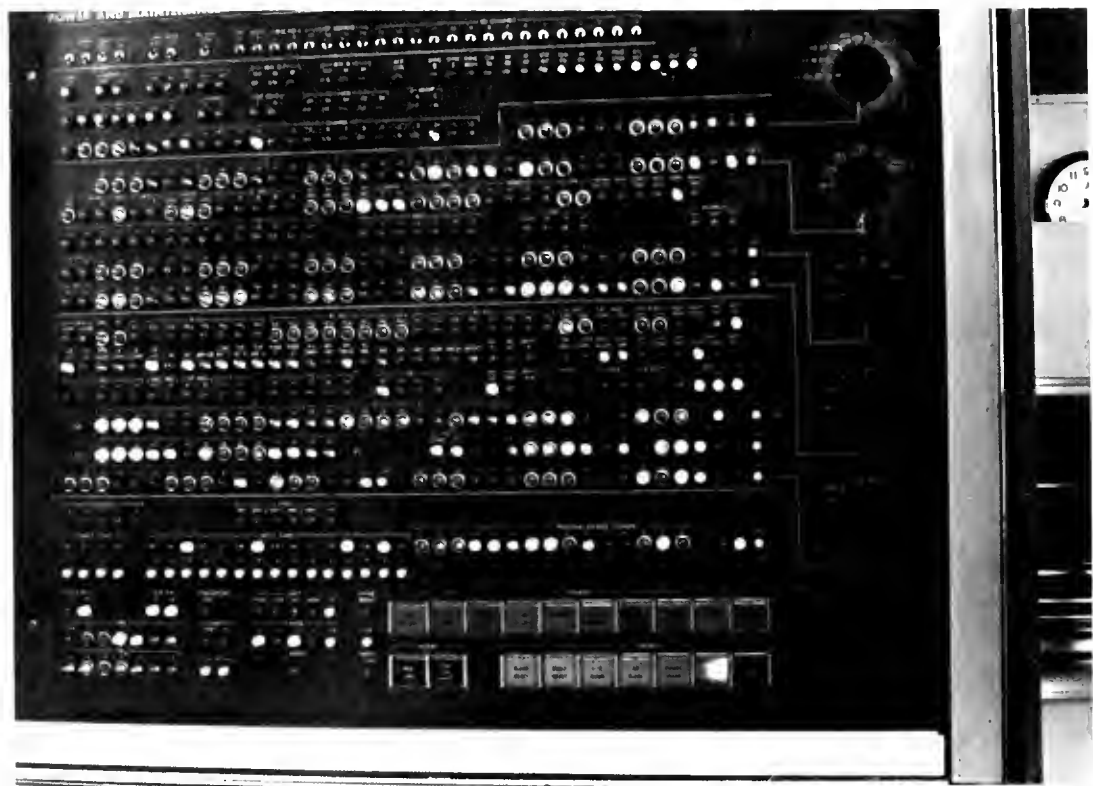

To the motorist driving through, the campus may seem massive, disjoint, and aloof. But to many students, it can mean warmth, understanding and sharing. The dorms, the Greeks, the churches, and individual organizations, sponsor parties, dinners and get togethers for the underprivileged, the crippled, and orphan children.

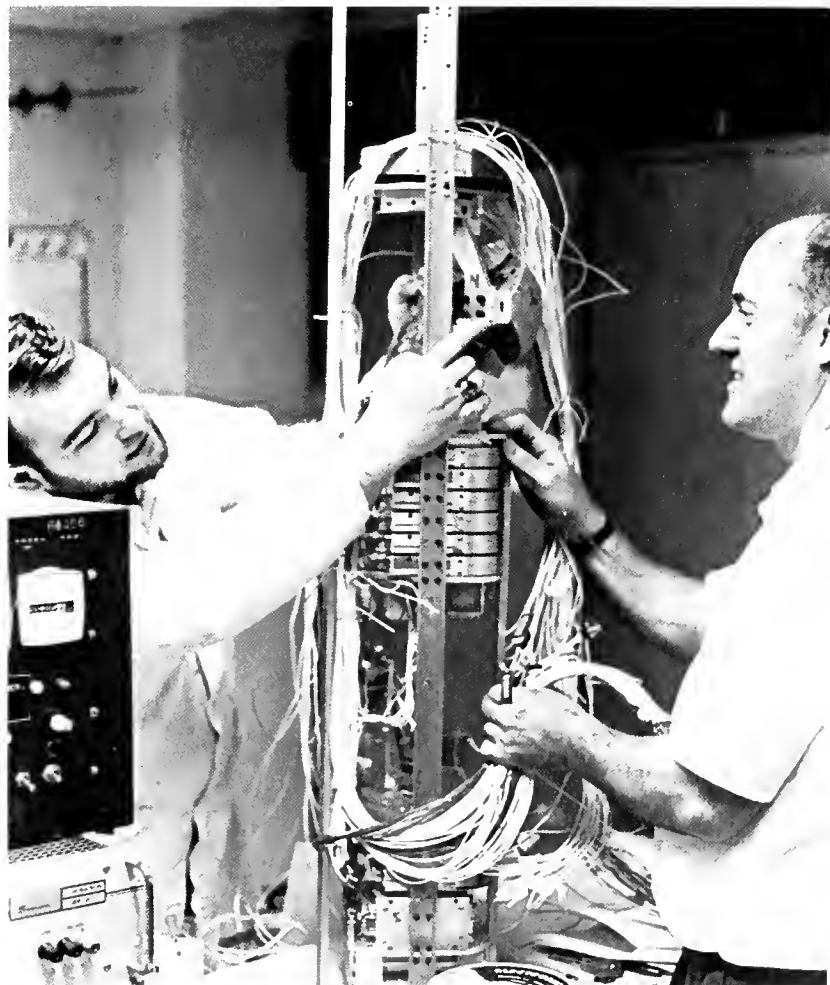

Maryland is not an isolated community—it goes beyond the campus to share a little with the world.

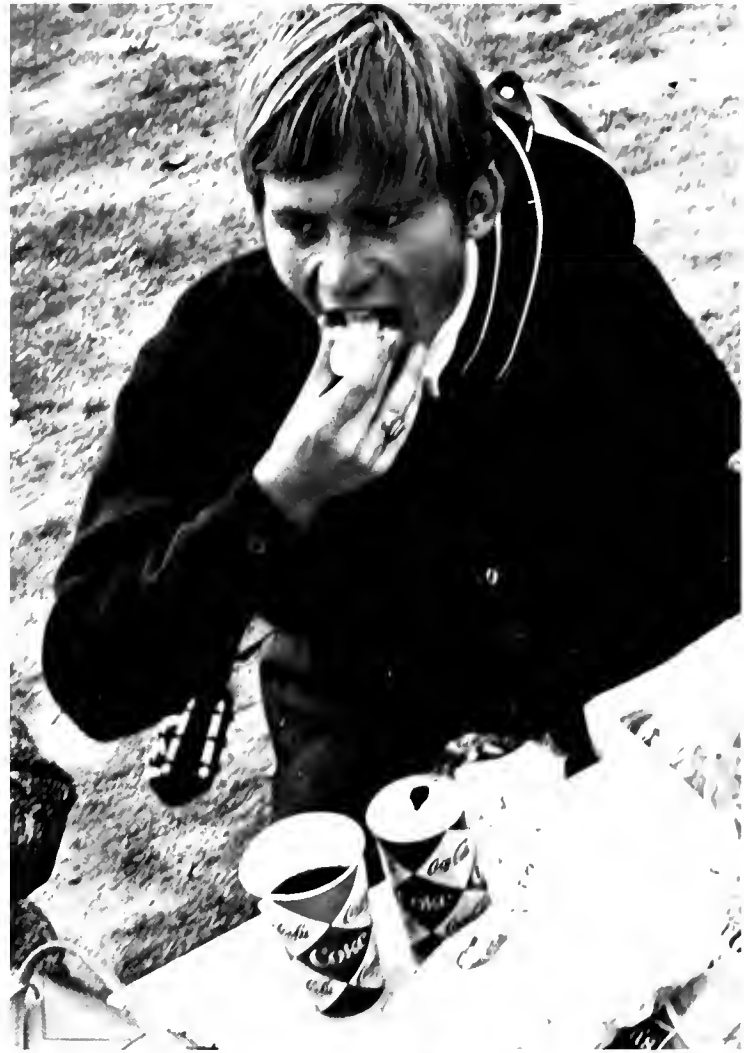

Religion has taken to change. The pulpit is now a place to express ideas concerning student ideas and demands.

The clergy is close to the student—often through Newman, Hillel, and other church-oriented groups. They can sympathize—yet understand the problems of the administrators. Clergymen, like administrators, are here for more than four years—they can see things in perspective, in light of what has gone before and what is likely to come next.

They relate religion to today and today's problems. They enjoy the challenge of a college congregation that thinks, and questions, and responds.

Religion is no longer a one hour Sunday affair. It's working and playing and praying together. It's a Thursday night celebration and a help-by-tutor program. It's a sharing seven days a week, 52 weeks a year.

SGA

Today our world changes so very swiftly that little remains stagnant from year to year. This is especially true with students. Students are different today than they were two or three years ago. They are more mature, more responsible, more concerned, and more aware than they were before. They are more concerned with what is relevant to them in a world where they face war, poverty, racial strife, and archaic academic systems.

Consequently, they have demanded a greater voice and greater participation in those affairs which concern them as citizens and as students. This self-assertion of students as adults and as free-thinking Americans has elevated them to an unprecedented level of importance in world, national, and educational affairs.

The Student Government Association has reflected this change in student thought and action this year. Much time and effort was successfully expended on changing social rules so that students alone could control their non-academic lives. A great deal of emphasis shifted to academic affairs where innovations in education, student evaluation of courses and teachers, and greater participation in curriculum planning became the norm, with continuing progress toward more meaningful student participation in planning their academic lives.

Furthermore, a greater participation in administrative decision-making and activity on the State level, was experienced by the student body, with many gains being made by the students. Several new or expanded student services were also instituted.

SGA this year has been more dynamic and successful than previous student governments, has been more outspoken, and has participated in a wider variety of areas which affect us as students. This was due in large part to the concern and dedication of its officers and members in striving for a better university. It is my sincere hope that we, as students, helped to make this university what it should be—an institution fulfilling the needs of its students and society.

OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT

UNIVERSITY OF MARYLAND
COLLEGE PARK 20740

It is traditional to speak of the importance of educated citizens in a democracy, of the educated man's contribution to the quality of life in his community, of the higher income a man will earn if he is a college graduate. These facts have been stated so often they seem commonplace. But they are both true and important.

Education cannot be mass produced. No matter how large or diverse the University becomes, success is still measured in personal terms -- broader horizons and increased abilities for the individual student, each in his own way.

The general achievements of the University, whether in education, research, or public service, ultimately are significant only as they have impact on the individual student and citizen.

College of Agriculture

Over a century old, the College of Agriculture could easily qualify for the paternal title of the granddaddy of the University. And today Gordon M. Cairns, the college's dean in his eighteenth year of service here, points with pride to the contributions Maryland has made to agriculture. And he indicates that the opportunities in agriculture are almost unlimited—and that Maryland, the Free State's largest educational institution—also offers an almost unlimited, varied academic program so that these opportunities may be realized.

The college offers 13 agricultural study areas, including special curricula, which prepares the student for further study in forestry and veterinary practice. Other areas include animal science, botany, entomology, food science, and horticulture. But Dean Cairns foresees even more room for expansion in geology and landscape architecture, two courses that are now in separate departments in the college.

What kind of student enrolls in agriculture in today's modern era? A report shows that a high proportion come from suburbia and the city, indicating that even the so-called "city-slicker" is becoming aware of the opportunities in the field. For example, 66 percent of this year's freshmen class came from Suburbia and the city, while only 34 percent came from rural areas. However, Dean Cairns says, "The interests in a particular kind of career perhaps is the deciding factor rather than from where the student's home is."

For a student to succeed in agriculture he must be mechanically and mathematically minded, as the college requires an even greater number of credits in the pure sciences and mathematics than the minimum University requirements.

And what are some of the opportunities the agricultural student finds in agriculture today?

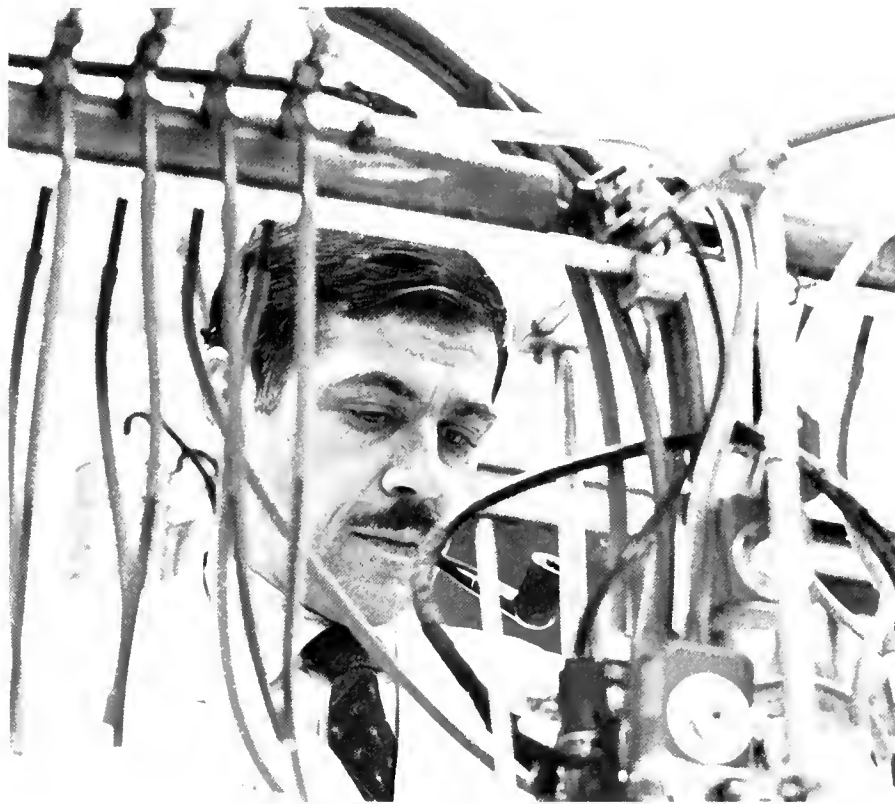

- Research firms, both private and public, need him.
- Supermarket chains, electric companies, dairy distributors and meat packing companies need him.
- Banks, insurance companies and government agencies need him.
- The news media need him.

Dean Gordon M. Cairns

The 20th century's awareness for good conservation practices in tackling the problems of soil erosion and water pollution, and the necessity for fish and wild life management—all of these things enhance the agricultural students' job prospects. And all of these things add up to make agriculture the world's biggest employer.

School of Architecture

The School of Architecture is now located in temporary quarters in the Gulch, with a new building in the planning stages. The "barracks" in the Gulch are renovated to provide air conditioned lecture rooms, studies, library and office space. The facilities, in direct contrast to the usually gloomy halls and shadowy dark classrooms, are bright, spacious places providing adequate space for the 140 students now enrolled in the program to study and create. The exciting new building, which is planned to be completed by 1970, is a major stimulus to a feeling of newness and fascination displayed by students and faculty alike. While being of an advanced design of interconnecting open spaces with studios centrally located the new building will still be compatible with the overall Georgian style.

The Architecture school offers a 5 year program and it is also the newest, being founded in 1967. The courses are a cohesive integration of design, structural analysis and environmental study. With this program the students are also freed of non-professional academics allowing them to actively and directly pursue architecture as a career.

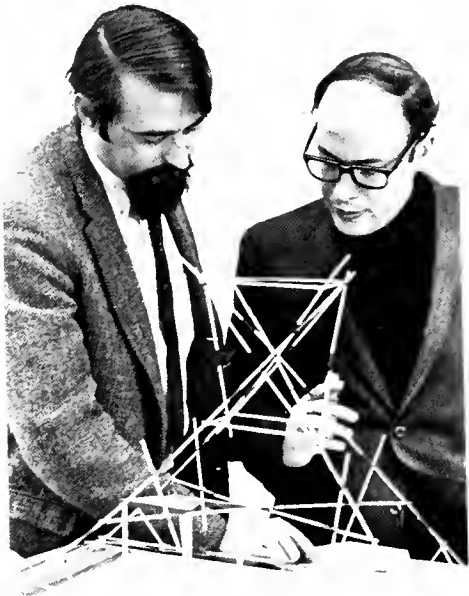

These people who will shape tomorrow's environment have many problems facing them. An exploding population coupled with industrialization have created an enormous urban crisis. Many areas of today's cities are on the edge of economic and social disaster, with whole neighborhoods becoming ghettos and living at a threatening level of frustration. These are problems that will have to be coped with by the architecture field, and have generated a sense of urgency in the environmental design profession.

Today, relevancy is the password of youth and alienation is an integral part of campus life. The School of Architecture has provided an answer for its students to these difficult problems. This is accomplished by combining the awareness of the troubles of society with a cohesive spirit between faculty and students. In the words of Dean John Hill this is described as "a participatory democracy," "a continual give and take of ideas." Students and faculty alike work on projects dealing with real problems in real society. They are involved. This spirit of architecture is to shelter and enhance Man's life on earth and to fulfill his belief in the nobility of existence."

Dean John W. Hill

College of Arts and Sciences

When trying to summarize and describe the College of Arts and Sciences, one finds a real problem—diversity. Offering 29 possible majors, A & S ranges from music to molecular physics.

This diversity also creates problems for A & S administrators. It's difficult for them to provide for the great spectrum of student interests. Especially when there are 10,000 students for which to provide. A & S contains more than one-third of the University's student population. Naturally, mixing numbers and diversity makes Dean Charles A. Manning's job a challenging one.

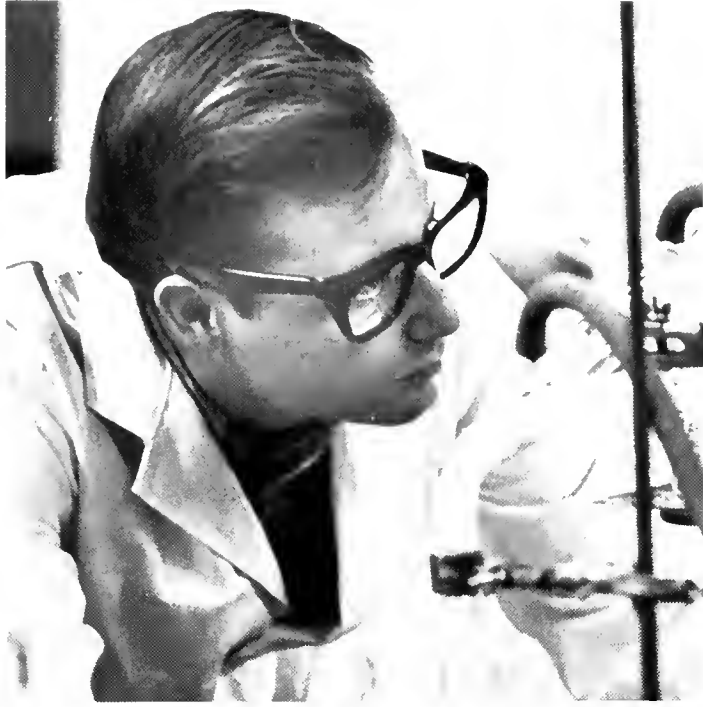

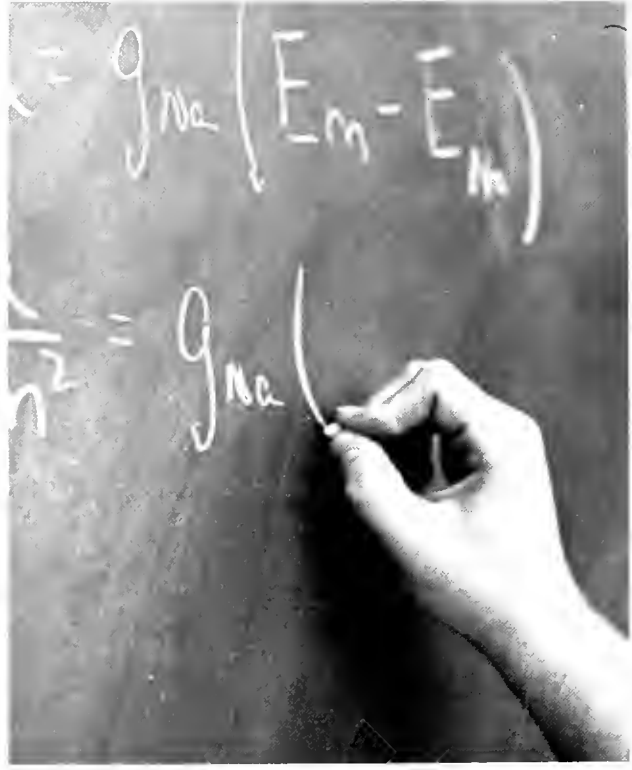

Continually growing, Arts and Sciences is certainly a college of contrasts. As one student mixes paint another may be mixing chemicals. As one student transposes music, another translates French.

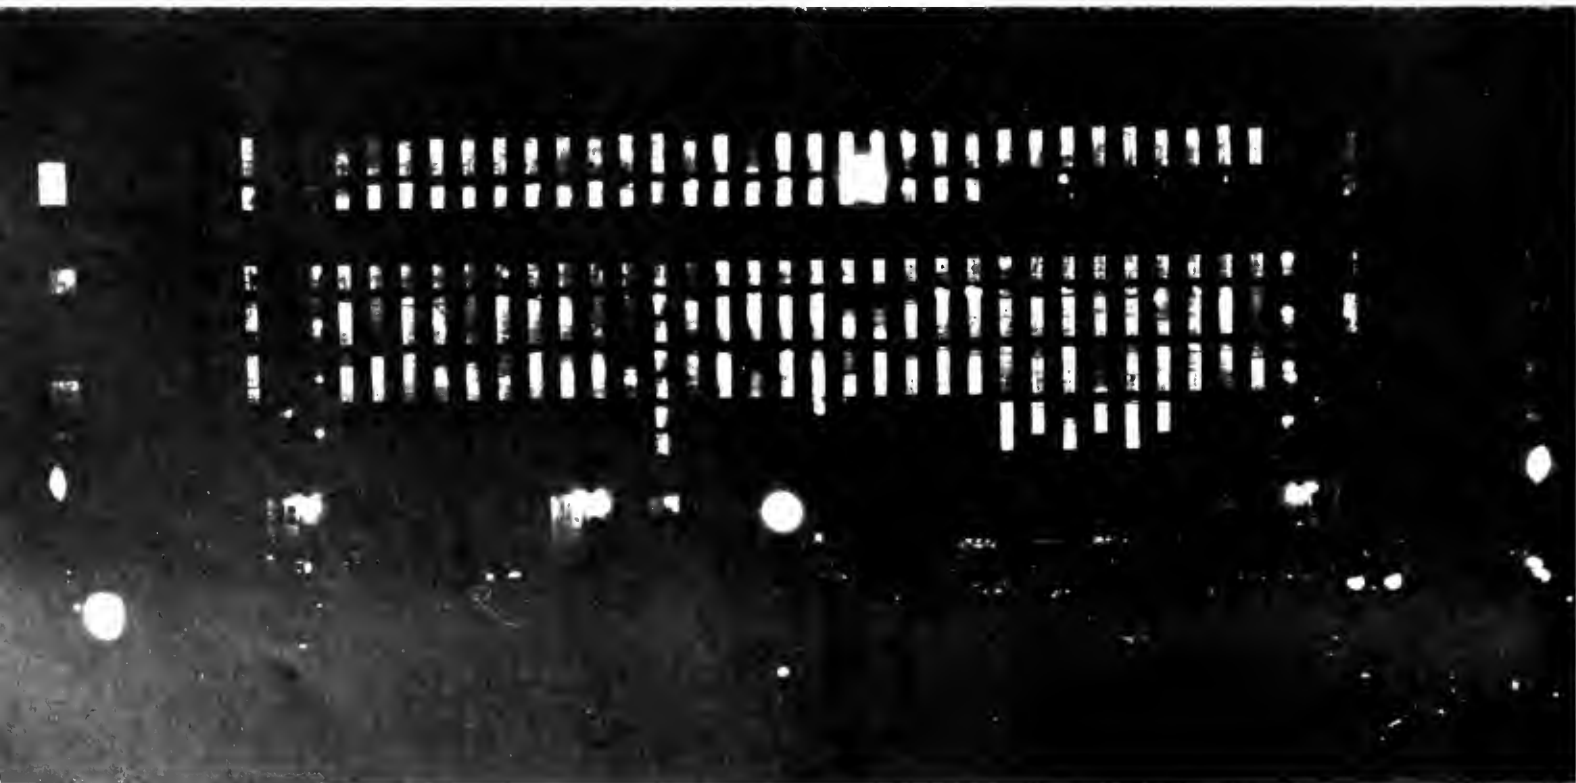

The College of Arts and Sciences is unique in its blending of two exact opposites. It strives to teach students to think and work in exact terms and precise calculations. Yet at the same time, it strives to promote individualism and freedom of expression, as well as developing the abstract. At first glance, this is another aspect of contrast within the College. But to the fully developed man, the uniting of the freedom of the arts with the exactness of science is important.

Diversity and contrast make A & S unique. And as one student observed, "At least we can't be stereotyped."

College of Business and Public Administration

Dean Donald W. O'Connell

The school of Business and Public Administration, located high on the hill overlooking most of the campus, makes up a sizeable proportion of the total University. The Dean of BPA, Dr. Donald O'Connell, heads up a full time staff of 154 professors that administers to 4000 undergraduates, and 600 graduate students. These people are distributed into six departments: business administration, economics, geography, and government-politics which have degrees available up to the doctoral level, and journalism and information analysis offering degrees only on the undergraduate level. Yet these departments are only part of that segment of the university called BPA, for two bureaus are incorporated into this school. These bureaus, the Business and Economic Research Bureau and the Bureau of Government Research, have little to do with teaching but are designed to study some of the pressing problems of the state concerned with business or government.

In today's world there is a pressing need for competent and educated leaders of business and for our massive government structure. The University produces a great number of people slated by society to fill these positions. In fact there are so many produced that one begins to wonder at the quality. People going into business and government need to be aware of and involved with society enough to understand its problems and improve its quality. These problems are substantially taken care of at this University by its program of involvement. Outside projects are the method. Marketing, accounting and operations research have integral projects built into the courses. Journalism has established a summer internship program which places journalism majors in jobs designed to give them actual practical experience. And the numerous professional societies, twenty-two in all, are very active in bringing outside speakers to campus, initiating tutoring programs, sponsoring service projects and many other things. In fact the accounting honorary Beta Alpha Psi won a first place in a nation-wide contest for their very progressive program.

Education

With the present crisis of teacher shortage, the College of Education handles the burden of training students for teaching positions of any variety, ranging from kindergarten to college to special education.

A major part of the training of a teacher involves student teaching and observation within the public school systems. Formerly students were assigned to schools in a rather haphazard fashion. But a new concept being used is the establishment of teaching centers—a cluster of schools containing elementary, junior high, and senior high schools. Teachers assigned to these schools are able to meet and discuss problems and programs within each center. This promotes a better understanding of student problems, background, and progress.

A related department to the College of Education is the Institute of Child Study. Supported by the University, the Institute makes studies of individual children, to increase knowledge in the field of educational psychology. Investigating the many facets and influences on the personality of the learner helps both in-service teachers and student teachers to better understand and aid the child.

Another progressive division within the College is the Department of Industrial Arts. Under the guidance of Dr. Donald Maley, the department has developed one of the most progressive programs in the country. Maryland's Industrial Arts Department has been a leader in expanding the field from a traditionally vocational approach to a broad understanding of industry's place in today's world. One outstanding feature of the department is the faculty's striving to match student teaching assignments to the needs of the individual.

With the growing importance of technology in education, the University is a leader. The technology center represents the great advances being made in education. Now audio-visual aids and teaching machines demonstrate the use of up-to-date communications media.

College of Engineering

Changes in the College of Engineering's academic programs for 1969, to meet the ever-changing demands of the scientific world, highlight the college's efforts to bring Maryland to the forefront in engineering.

A "Co-op Plan," which combines classroom study with professional work in the field, is scheduled to begin this summer. The plan will add Maryland to the list of some 50 top engineering colleges in the U.S. that already have this program. The five-year degree program will be offered to third-year students mainly in the mechanical, electrical engineering areas, because these two have the largest enrollments. In the future it may be extended to other engineering fields.

Dean Robert B. Beckmann says that the "Co-op" will be a step forward in raising the quality of education to engineering students here.

Another innovation is a recent proposal for an "undesignated degree in engineering." This addition to the curricula is designed to give flexibility to students' future plans.

But the college is not without its problems. The yearly turnover in the freshman class, because of academic problems, is 20 percent. So a student-faculty committee, led by T. W. Cadman, assistant professor of Chemical Engineering, came to the rescue and a Freshman Counselling and Guidance Office was set up on the grass roots level.

Dean Beckmann, who is deeply concerned with the problem, says, "We hope with this kind of personalized approach that freshmen will come in any time and see one of the two faculty members who are volunteer advisors. The problem is not so much with the sophomores and the rest but with the freshmen who are inclined to experience trouble from the start. If we can get them to come in early, they may be able to be saved."

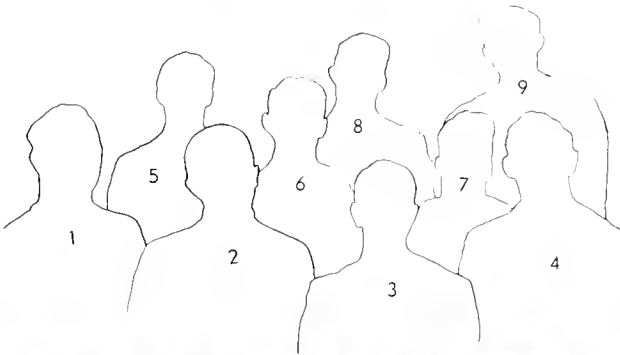

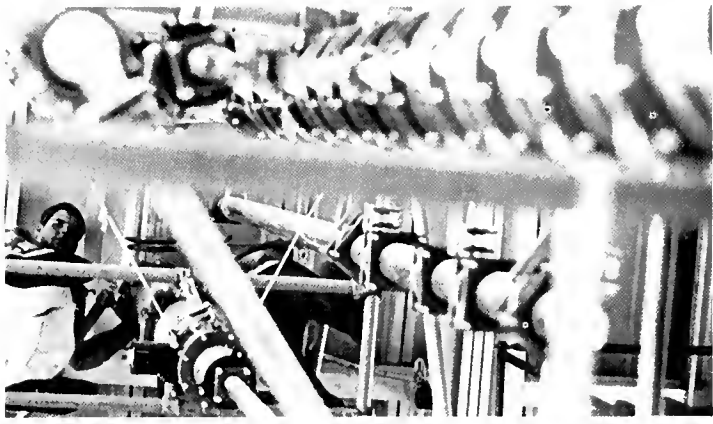

Finally, the 1969-70 academic years will mark the college's 75th Anniversary Year. Speakers from various industries will be on hand; conferences and seminars will be held.

Dr. Beckmann says, "This is to give the college a better image across the country, to show that we are becoming a force in engineering."

Home Economics

Home Economics is "riding on the crest of a wave," says Dean Marjory Brooks of the College of Home Economics. And to meet the crest of it the College opened a new area of study when it created the Department of Family and Community Development.

In the good old days, the family was able to take care of all its needs, but today the community has taken over many of the family's functions. So it became the obligation of the universities to train specialists to guide members of the family toward a better life. With a heavy emphasis on the social sciences, the College of Home Economics is preparing students to give valuable service to the community in this field. For example, students may become family life consultants, home management consultants, and, with a graduate degree, marriage counselors.

And to keep up with the fast changing times, the College's Food and Nutrition Department is revising some of its courses as government programs, such as Medicare. University students, armed with an arsenal of knowledge in chemistry, are preparing to go out and fight the war on hunger by doing research for food manufacturers or government agencies. As Dean Brooks points out: "The hunger problem centers on a lack of food that gives proper nutrition, rather than a lack of food in the United States."

But Home Economics offers more than just training in the lab with test tubes. The departments of Applied Design and Textiles and Clothing focus on the aesthetic. Each gives home economics students a chance to fulfill their creative needs. Courses in these areas include fashion design, costume design, metallurgy, and ceramics.

In research the College has not lagged behind others. A significant diet study was carried out on several groups of coeds to analyze the utilization of amino acids from food protein. Another was concerned with the intake of carbohydrates on longevity—this time white mice were used as guinea pigs.

School of Library and Information Sciences

The School of Library and Information Sciences was founded in the fall of 1965. It is the second such new graduate professional school since World War II, and the first to be established at College Park. It is unique in that it is a separate School whose sole purpose is graduate study and research.

Now located in McKeldin Library, the School plans to move into the new library to be built in 1969-70.

The School is progressively oriented in a time of rapid changes in the field of library sciences. Students come from a wide variety of backgrounds and fields of study, ranging from History and Library Science to Theology and Nursing.

The School feels that its main purpose is "to place the intellectual character of librarianship on a sound and firm basis." While the Master of Library Science is the "major commitment" of the School, nevertheless, scholarship and research to promote knowledge and practice in the field is stressed. And to increase learning at the managerial level, the School offers the Library Administrators Development Program.

Finally, the School realizes its obligation to provide a harmonious balance between theory and practice. The "fusion of teaching, research, and practice" is kept foremost in the minds of the officials.

Now developing a doctorate degree, the School is eagerly meeting the great challenge of the needs of future decades.

Dean Paul Wasserman

College of Physical Education, Recreation, and Health

New ideas, new concepts, and rapid surges in growth—these things characterize the College of Physical Education, Recreation, and Health today.

From a tiny, not-yet-completely organized college in the summer of 1949, it has mushroomed into a school that guides and instructs about 18,525 people—and that figure continues to grow year by year. Probably no other college in the university can come close to influencing that many. Over 6,000 freshmen will have finished their health—physical education requirements this year, and 125 will have graduated from the college itself. Besides, over 11,000 young men and women will have enjoyed the two athletic programs the college offers to students in their spare time.

But the college has not grown in numbers only. It has been the pacemaker in new ideas and concepts: the innovator. As Lester Fraley, the college's dean for 19 years, indicates: "We now revise and modify our programs—depending on the trends with respect to the demands of elementary and secondary school officials. For example, if they want to teach square dancing, we will organize a course in it so that our graduates will be qualified to teach it."

Just two years ago, the college set up an adaptive program in its curriculum designed to make physical education instructors proficient in teaching the handicapped.

Unlike the physical education department, the departments of health and recreation are not oriented to teacher training. Health graduates interested in advancing knowledge in their area may go to work for such organizations as the Tuberculosis Association. Recreation graduates, on the other hand, may find jobs with city recreation departments or the YMCA as program directors.

And now in the planning stages is a new gymnasium—a testimonial to the increasing growth of the College of Physical Education, Recreation, and Health at the University of Maryland.

University College

Maryland's University College is always on the go, and so is its chief. Dean Ray Ehrensberger, better known as the "Flying Dean of Maryland," has flown over a million miles since 1952 in order to administer his "worldwide, educational domain" on over 400 study outposts in 25 foreign lands ranging from Asia, Africa, and Europe to the frigid regions of the Arctic.

Founded in 1949, the purpose of UC is to give servicemen and their dependents who are stationed overseas an education, although its headquarters, here in College Park, offers evening courses to civilians on and off campus.

The Munich campus gives the children of military personnel an opportunity to get two years of college study in a foreign country. Education-minded servicemen of all ranks and ages attend classes, often taught by Ph.D.'s, on a multitude of Air Force bases and Army posts. Career officers, if they stay with Maryland, aim for degrees in general studies. Those who leave the service transfer their fully accredited course credits to other colleges.

And it is not uncommon to find career military men who finally reach their life-long goal—a college diploma—after studying for 10 or 15 years. Take, for instance, the example of Commander Ralph L. Moore, now of Hollywood, Md. It took him 24 years of on and off work to get his degree from Maryland. And when he got it he was stationed in Iceland; and Dean Ehrensberger hopped a plane to confer a degree on the base's sole graduate. As the Dean told a Washington Post reporter, "I decided that if he could spend 24 years getting this degree, I could travel 2,600 miles to confer it on him."

The story of University College has furnished national journals with material about the unique global scope of Maryland's classrooms. Washington papers have done stories on it too. But the big story came in 1965 when the Reader's Digest brought UC national recognition for its service to the world.

Phi Kappa Phi

Phi Kappa Phi, academic honorary founded in 1897 at the University of Maine, selects its members from all fields of University study with recognition and encouragement of superior scholarship as its purpose. The society strives to fulfill its motto: "The love of learning rules the world."

Members are selected on the recommendation of deans of colleges. They comprise the upper ten percent of the graduating class, junior and senior students possessing at least a 3.3 cumulative average and 60 credit hours, masters candidates who have obtained a 3.7 average and doctoral candidates with a 3.5 average.

This semester 239 students were inducted in the chapter at the University.

Who's Who

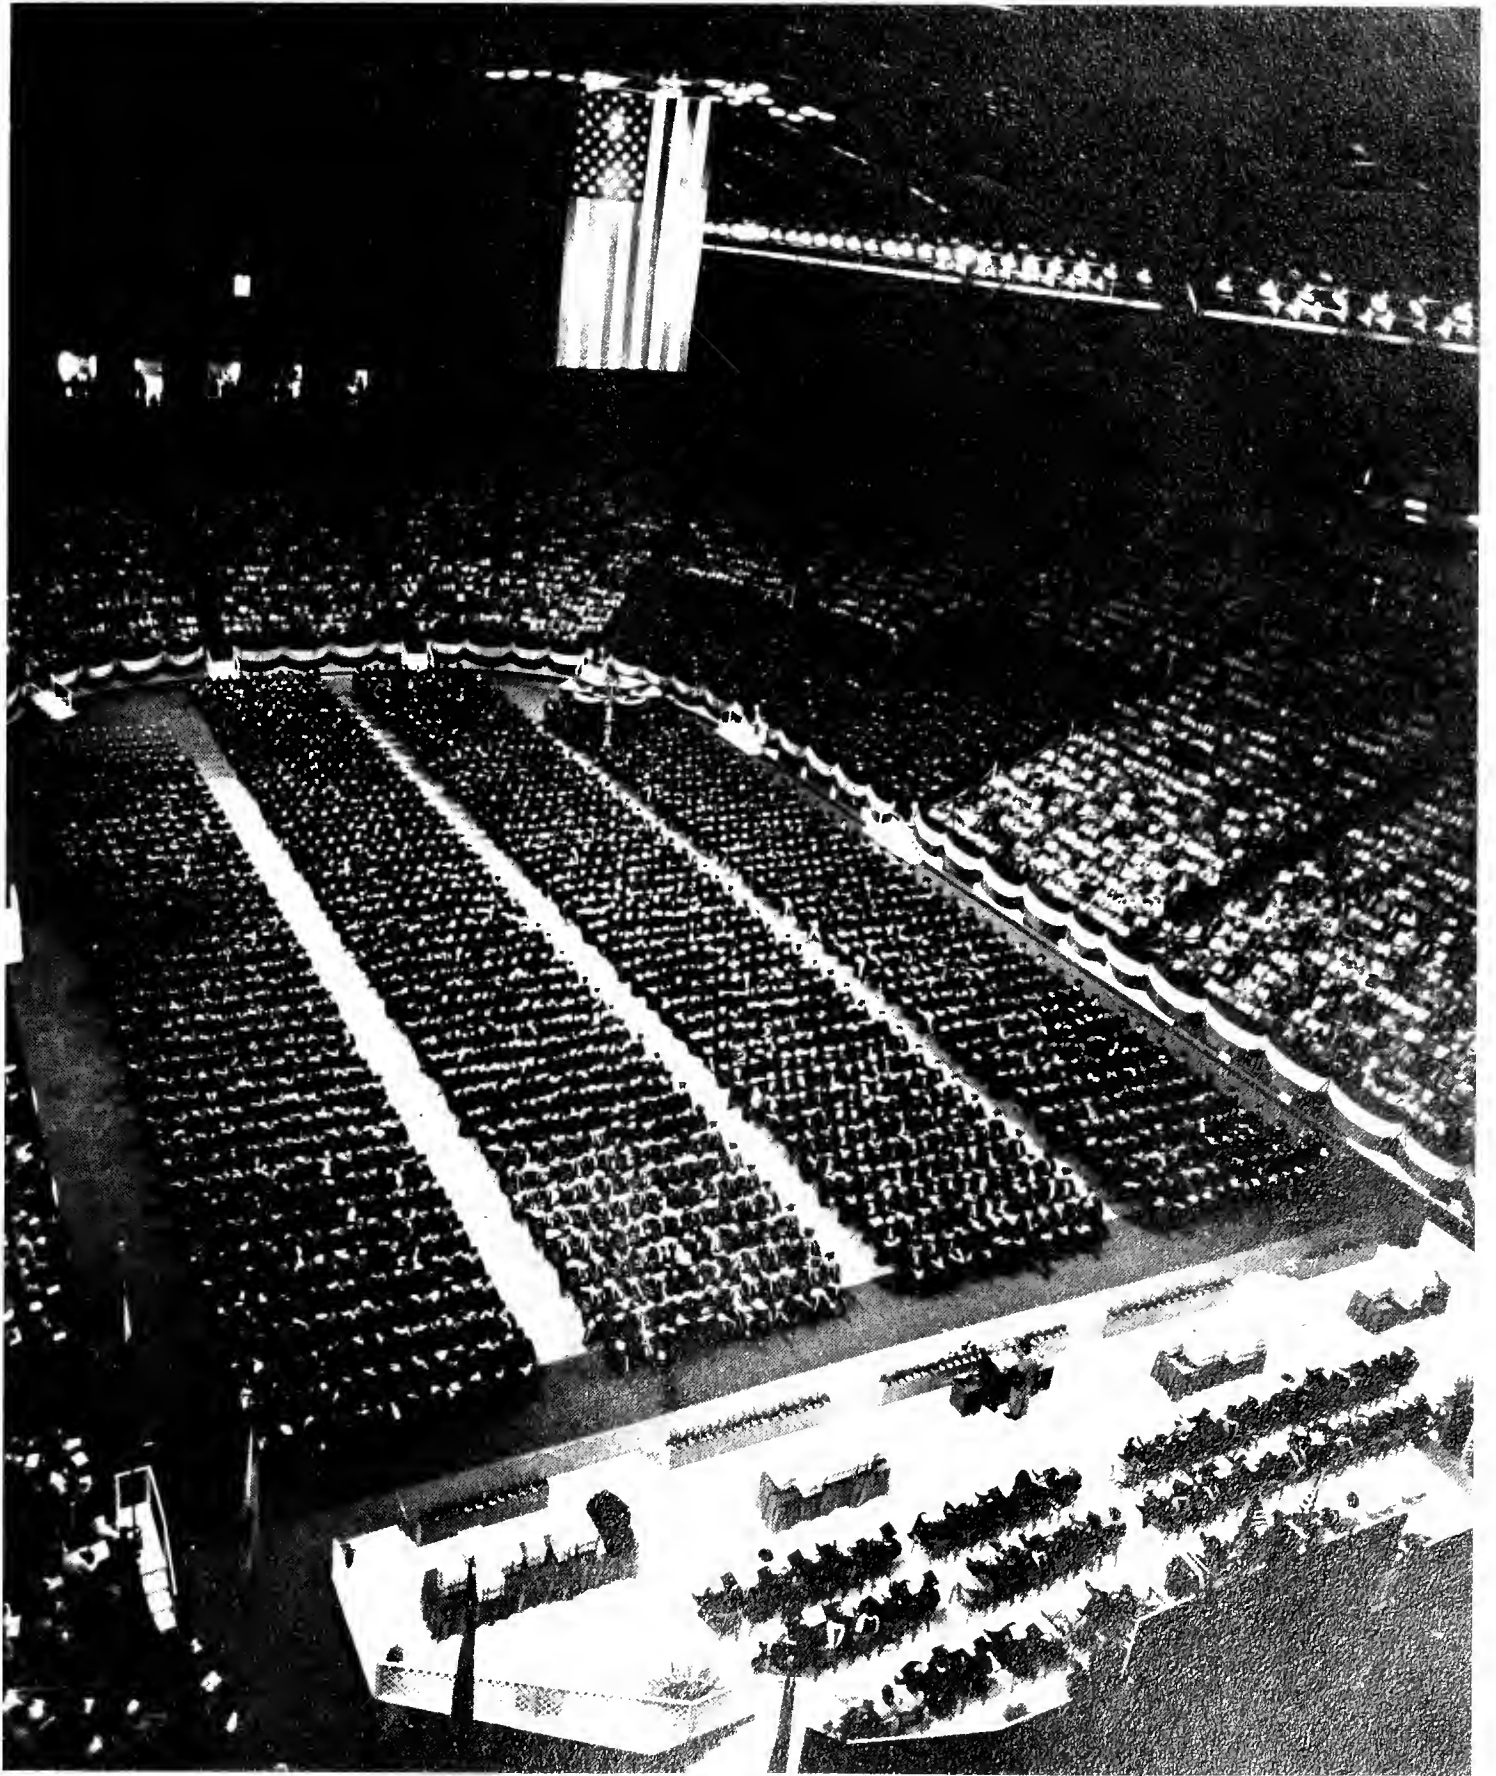

In order to be selected as a candidate for membership in Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities, a student must be an outstanding leader, scholar, participant in both educational and extracurricular activities, and citizen.

To be chosen for this honor a student is first recommended by the University and is then voted on by the national organization.

Sports Scene

The major problem undermining the University of Maryland athletic department is one of inconsistency. Why can't an enormous, state-supported college, possessing the seemingly unlimited advantages that Maryland has over other schools produce winning teams in her major sports, notably football and basketball?

This question has been the topic of discussion throughout the entire school year. Sportswriters, opposing coaches, students, spectators and many others find the present level of mediocrity practically inconceivable. The fact of the matter is, it's down right unbelievable!

Over-all seriousness of the departmental stagnation was not totally realized until only recently. A careful investigation of the situation was made by a special athletic committee, appointed by the Board of Regents. Presenting its findings to the Board, the committee recommended positive and immediate action to eliminate the pressing problem. The report read:

"The Committee recommends that the Board of Regents request the administration to take whatever action may be possible within the academic framework of the University to strengthen the football and basketball programs."

Careful examination of these programs under attack reveals some perplexing and possibly self-perpetrating facts. Commonplace among these is that the University athletic department is under obligation to produce winners, something not accomplished in the major sports for several years.

In direct contrast, the minor sports repeatedly rank high in the national standings, thus creating a very paradoxical situation. It is difficult to comprehend that the same university can field a National Collegiate Athletic Association championship soccer squad, unjustly classified as a minor sport while the football team, only last season ranked as the number one worst team in the nation in early season polls.

Breaking away from the national level, Atlantic Coast Conference statistics serve as a barometer of success. The basketball team barely escaped the ACC cellar by slipping past last place Clemson in the final game of the regular season. Then in the first round of the championship playoffs, they were soundly defeated by South Carolina. Maryland footballers in keeping with the norm, could only muster two victories in as many years, both coming this past season.

On the other end of the continuum, soccer, lacrosse, cross country, and indoor track continued their complete dominance of the ACC by completing championship campaigns. Why such little success in the major sports?

Analysis of this problem must include the area of recruitment, basic drawing card for good talent. Because of her status as a state university, very limited scholarship funds are available, especially to out of state students. This factor places a restrictive clamp on the entire program. Many fine athletes are lured from the College Park campus by substantial financial offerings of other universities with more established recruitment systems.

Once a team has established itself as a good one, something that football and basketball are far from achieving, players will give it more consideration than a "second rater." They realize that recognition is practically impossible on a low ranking team. The spoils, many times in the form of professional contracts, go to the victors, the ones with which they wish to associate.

Another point to consider is poor student interest created by poor athletic performances. It is very difficult to impress possible prospects with a half-filled field house or stadium while trying to disguise student apathy concerning the sports situation. Poor publicity campaigns play a major part in this apparent non-interest while scheduling blunders consistently deny those interested fans their chance to see more of the Terps than they already do.

Drastic changes must be made to eliminate these stumbling blocks and vault Maryland athletics back into prominence. The early months of 1969 have witnessed the start of Maryland's comeback to the major sports scene, with the administration taking whatever action possible.

This year has seen the resignation of head football coach, Bob Ward, following a player protest of his coaching prowess. Accepting his resignation "in the best interest of the University," the newly organized athletic department quickly hired George Lester, head coach at nearby Richard Montgomery High School to fill the vacated spot.

Basketball head coach Frank Fellows was fired following the Terp's disappointing showing in the 1968-69 campaign. A short but thorough search brought Lefty Driesell, winning coach of Davidson College's high ranking basketball team.

Last but surely not least, Jim Kehoe, the University's brilliant track coach was appointed Athletic Director to replace retiring Bill Cobey. Possibly through realization of the fact that the entire brunt of the athletic dilemma rests on his shoulders, Kehoe has relegated himself to swift, hard hitting action policies.

While speaking on the subject of his agonizing reappraisal of the entire University sports situation, Kehoe made it clear that changes must be made.

"I'm used to winning, and I believe in winning. At this point in my life I'm not going to embark on any policy to the contrary."

This attitude may be exactly what the program needs. Whether or not Kehoe can communicate this spirit to our new coaches and they, in turn, to the players, remains to be seen.

Not to be mistaken, Maryland critics of the major sports will have much to feed on this coming season. One cannot expect an entire reversal over night. However all aspects of the athletic program are under intensive investigation and Maryland sports fans everywhere can be assured that everything physically possible to improve conditions as they now stand will be done.

Football

This year, 1968, was destined to be the "Year of the Terp". How could the football team miss? Alan Pastrana, record-breaking quarterback of the 1966 campaign, who sat out last season with an unheeled knee was returning. Bill Lovett, leading ground gainer from last year was looking forward to another fine season. Ernie Torrain had decided to give it another try after his argument with offensive coach Tom Steigleder. The likes of Rick Carlson, high scorer last season, Ron Pearson, defensive standout, and many others pointed to a very promising football campaign.

Who could have imagined the heartbreak which lay ahead—untimely fumbles, intercepted passes, unpredictable officiating (to say the least), dropped passes, and many other unfulfilled expectations? Numerous penalties, on both players and coach, constantly blunted any offensive drives Maryland could muster.

Spring training started early with approximately 120 candidates reporting for the squad. The nucleus of this group consisted of 32 lettermen, all having one goal in mind . . . to win a football game and put an end to Maryland's 13 game losing streak. Well aware of this pressing situation was Head Coach Bob Ward, now in his second season. Ward had big plans to better the 0-9 record of last season.

The season's opener came quickly with Maryland being put to a stiff test by nationally ranked Florida State. A strong Seminole team, led by All-American end Ron Sellers, handed the Terps their first of many setbacks of the season, 24-14.

Traveling to Syracuse in search of victory, the Terps met the big Orange in Archibald Stadium. The big Orange proved to be a little too big as they overwhelmed the gridders, handing them their 15th straight loss. Coach Ward, understandably upset after the 32-14 defeat, lamented, "I never thought a victory would be so hard to get."

The winless Terps were hungry for victory when they invaded Norfolk, Va. to play Duke in the annual Oyster Bowl . . . and for 59 of the 60 minutes could taste the Blue Devil Special. With a little bit of luck they would have feasted, but a controversial decision by the referee allowed Duke to gain field position and kick what proved to be the winning field goal with three seconds remaining in the game.

After the 30-28 heartbreaker, coach Ward summed up the situation perfectly—"Our boys played their heads off, they're just unlucky." One bright spot of the otherwise dreary afternoon was the selection of the Terp fullback Bill Lovett as the outstanding player of the Oyster Bowl.

Bob Ward, coach turned prophet, predicted a victory over the visiting Tar Heels from North Carolina. The gods must have been smiling for the prophecy soon became a reality. The game saw hard running Bill Lovett astonish the crowd by gaining 172 yards for the afternoon and break a Terp rushing record with 39 carries. Alan Pastrana looked like the quarterback of old as he threw for 129 yards in nine completions. As the gun sounded The Terps dropped from the ranks of the winless. They had finally broken the spell cast upon them sixteen games earlier.

"This is the greatest day of my life!" said Ward, commenting on his first victory as head coach. The Maryland fans showed their appreciation for this "greatest day" by mobbing the team in the center of the field and hoisting Ward and Pastrana upon their shoulders for an impromptu ride to the locker room. The goal posts were ripped down and disappeared from the field almost as fast as the N.C. players did. It was truly a fine day for the University. The sun had broken through the overcast to help brighten the occasion, and Coach Ward, happiest of them all, was finally smiling.

The smiles were to be short-lived however. Maryland would win one more game. Again the goal posts (wooden ones this time) would fall to an enthusiastic, rain soaked Homecoming crowd. The 21-19 victory over the South Carolina Gamecocks was the last the Terps were to see for the rest of the season. Losing the last five games to North Carolina State, Wake Forest, Clemson, Penn State and Virginia, Maryland closed out another very disappointing campaign.

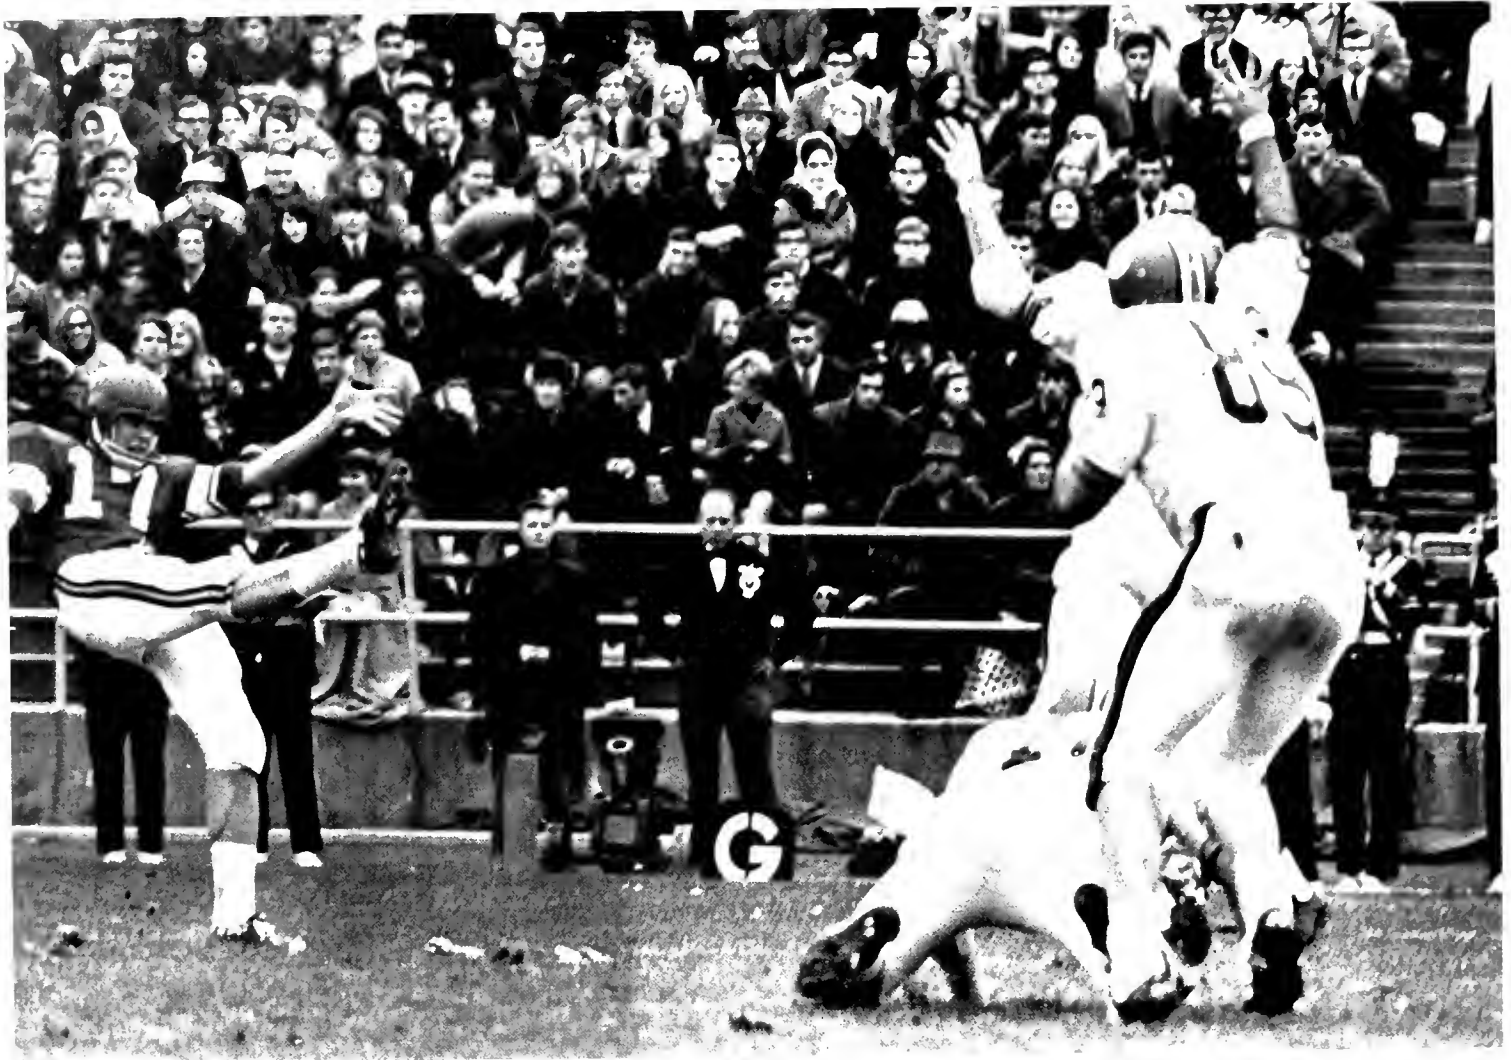

Even though the team appeared only average as a whole, individually it was strong. The tri-captains, Bill Lovett, Ron Pearson, and Alan Pastrana provided the team with able leadership. Fullback Lovett, with his outstanding running ability, consistently penetrated opponents' defenses at the clip of 4.4 yards per carry while gaining 963 yards and breaking a Maryland rushing record for carrying the ball 217 times. Tight end Ron Pearson gave the team much needed versatility in playing three different positions in as many years. Alan Pastrana, experiencing only a mediocre season, kept the team spirits high with his never-say-die attitude.

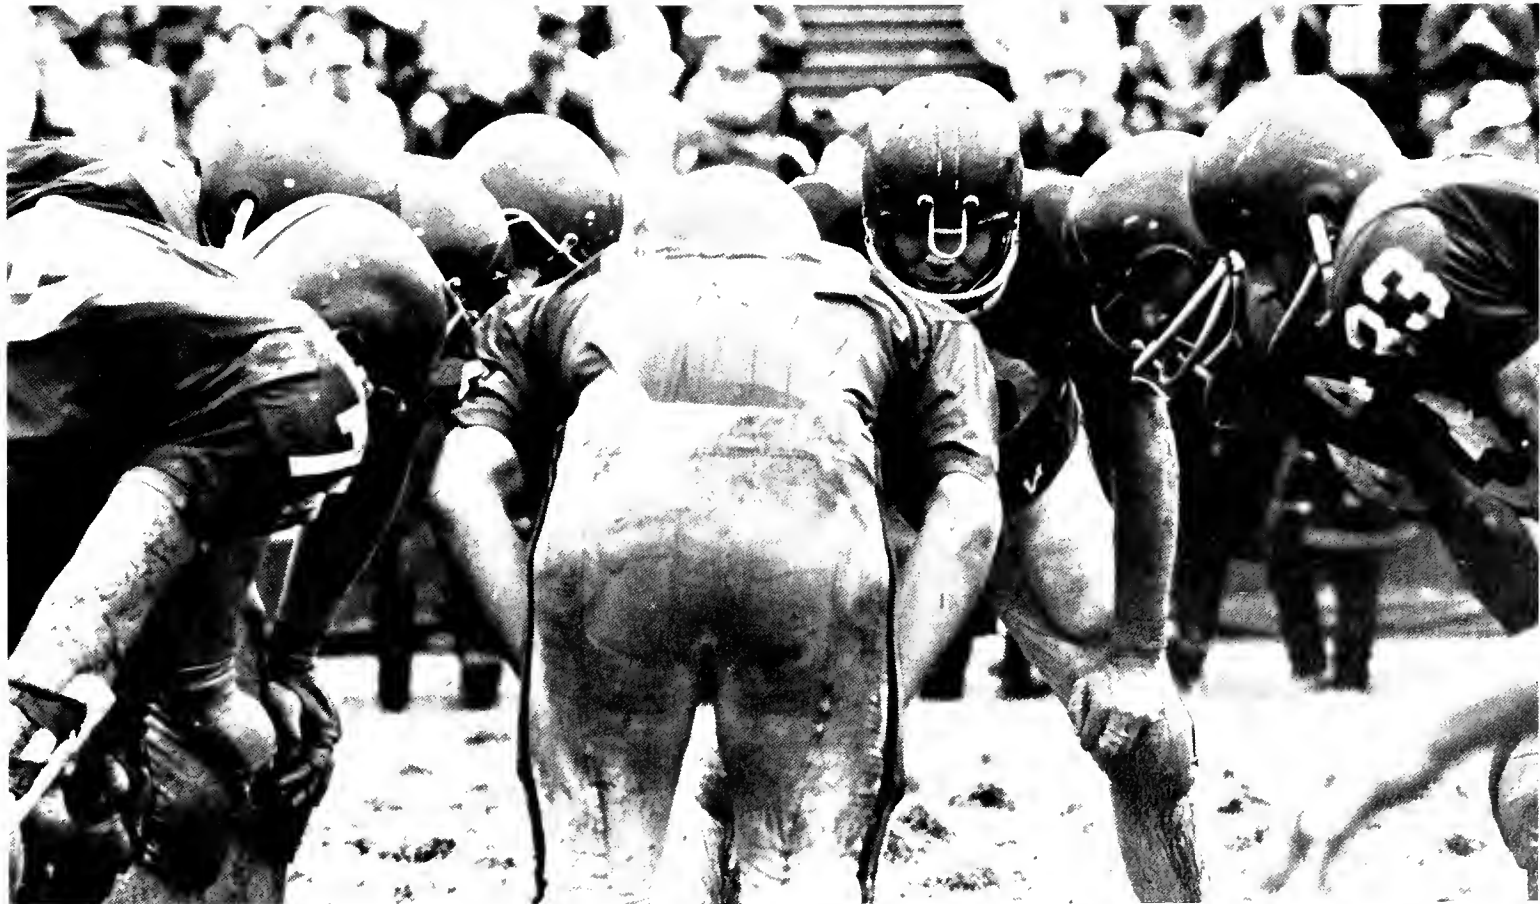

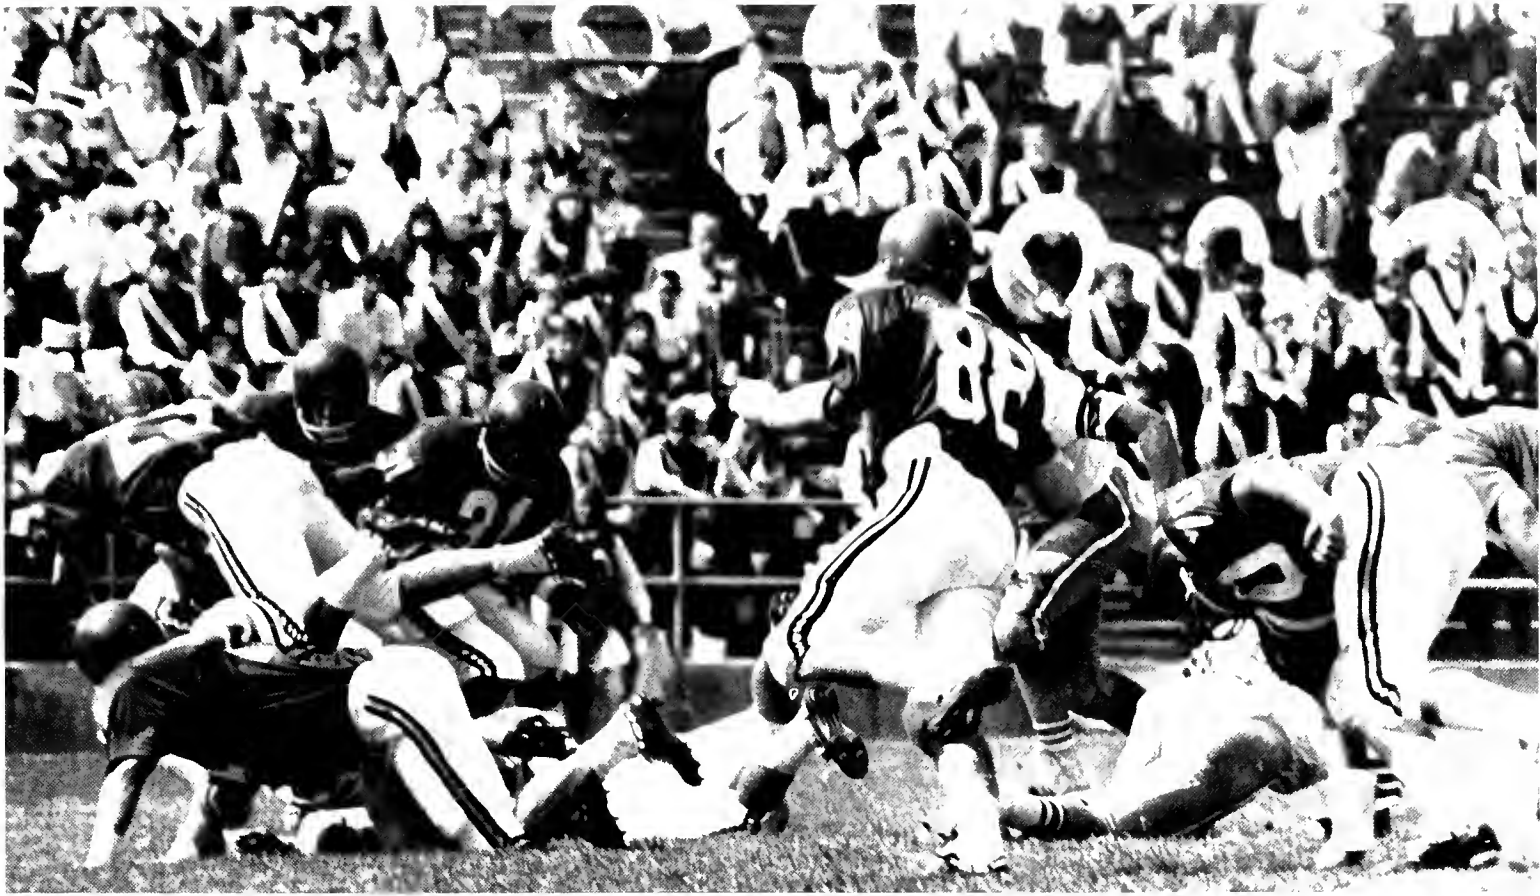

It was a very disappointing season for those seniors playing out their last year of eligibility, but on the other hand a very great challenge for the younger players making their move from the depths of obscurity to the first team. The future of Maryland football now rests in their hands.

With the likes of end Sonny Demczuk, the team's leading receiver, tailback Alvin Thomas, defensive tackle John Dyer, defensive back Wally Stalnaker, punter Greg Fries, quarterback Dennis O'Hara and many others, the eternal cry of "wait until next year" may be worth listening to.

Soccer— Co-national Champions

The fantastic Maryland Soccer Team, possibly the best in the nation, ended its season as the only undefeated major college team by gaining a tie for the National Collegiate Athletic Association title with the Spartans of Michigan State.

Head coach Doyle Royal gained his 24th consecutive Atlantic Coast Conference title along with the national championship. After the victory he commented, "In the 24 years I have coached soccer here, this is the best record any of my teams have ever had. The 1957 squad had a perfect year but only played 10 games." This year Royal had the help of two young assistants, Ron Hoch and Ray Buckley, both of whom have won honors in intercollegiate soccer.

Being ranked number one for a large part of the season is evidence that Maryland had many things going for them, all in the right direction. The most important was team work, the essence of victory. Each player complemented the other, on and off the field, playing not as a group of individuals but as a team.

Everyone knew from the opening day of practice that Maryland was going to be tough, but just how tough remained to be seen. Back from last year's team were co-captain Giancarlo Brandoni, All-Americans Alvaro Bittencourt and Mario Jelencovich, plus Bob Conner, Frank Delvecchio, Jay Lillian and Larry Ruhs. Other returnees included Bill Walker, Charlie Wiemers, and Bo White. This was the heart of the team that reached the NCAA playoffs last year only to be humiliated by Michigan State.

A newcomer to the Maryland Soccer scene, soon to gain fame among the entire population of this large campus was Rocco Morelli, native of Italy now hailing from New York. Gaining notice as junior college All-American while attending the same college as Mario Jelencovich and Giancarlo Brandoni, Rocco came to Maryland and led the team in scoring with a total of 15 goals.

His finest hour came in the NCAA playoff against San Jose State. Rocco took over the offensive chores and carried the team to a 4-3 victory by scoring all four of the Maryland goals. Another fine hour that few will forget was his prize winning performance on the Byrd Stadium turf during the St. Louis game in which he seemingly "succumbed" at least four or five times only to recover and further intimidate their goalie. Rocco added color to the team as well as the sport itself, and in his own colorful way should be a shoe-in for All-American honors.

The offensive honors due others were somewhat overshadowed by Rocco. Teammates Jerry Chareczko and Larry Ruhs carried a large part of the scoring load by finishing second and third respectively in offense. Ruhs, last year's leading scorer, was outstanding in the victory over George Washington University. Teaming up with Chareczko, Ruhs scored 4 goals and assisted on 3 others. Chareczko contributed 3 goals while playing only 3 quarters.

Steady, sure-footed play of captain Alvaro Bittencourt continually kept the Terps on the offensive while his stalwart defensive acts killed most enemy attacks.

The turning point of the season was the win over the Middies from Annapolis, the first since 1963. This made the Terps the best team in the South and allowed them a bye in the first round of the playoffs.

A strong defensive effort was exerted against a tough Navy eleven, one that was indicative of the Terp's play all season long. Outstanding defensive leaders were Giancarlo Brandoni and Mario Jelencovich. Goalie Jelencovich, possibly the best in college soccer, held regular season opponents to only 9 goals while posting 4 shutouts in the process. Center halfback Brandoni, playing the position the way it should be played, stopped the opposition's plays before they really could get started.

Brandoni had help from the ever ready duo of Les Bernard and Melih Sensoy, both having chances for All-American honors. Freshman halfback Sensoy, and Bernard from his fullback slot, combined to form a formidable defense, strong enough to carry the Terps to the national championship.

Looking back on such a successful season makes it difficult not to mention everyone involved in this true team effort. Frank Schoon remains the hero of the Navy game with his game-winning goal in the double overtime match. Wally Williams and Paul Stiel kept the team up during the crucial games of the early season. Recognition must also be given to the strong bench, a definite contributing factor to success. With the likes of Bob Connor, Bo White, Frank Delvecchio, Steve Salfeety, and many others in reserve, any coach would be happy, Doyle Royal included.

Very seldom does one have the privilege to see such a fine team as was assembled in 1968. The end of another season means the loss of several individuals through either graduation or loss of eligibility. Leaving the ranks of the championship team are Mario Jelencovich, Giancarlo Brandoni, Bob Conner, Bo White, Frank Delvecchio, Alvaro Bittencourt.

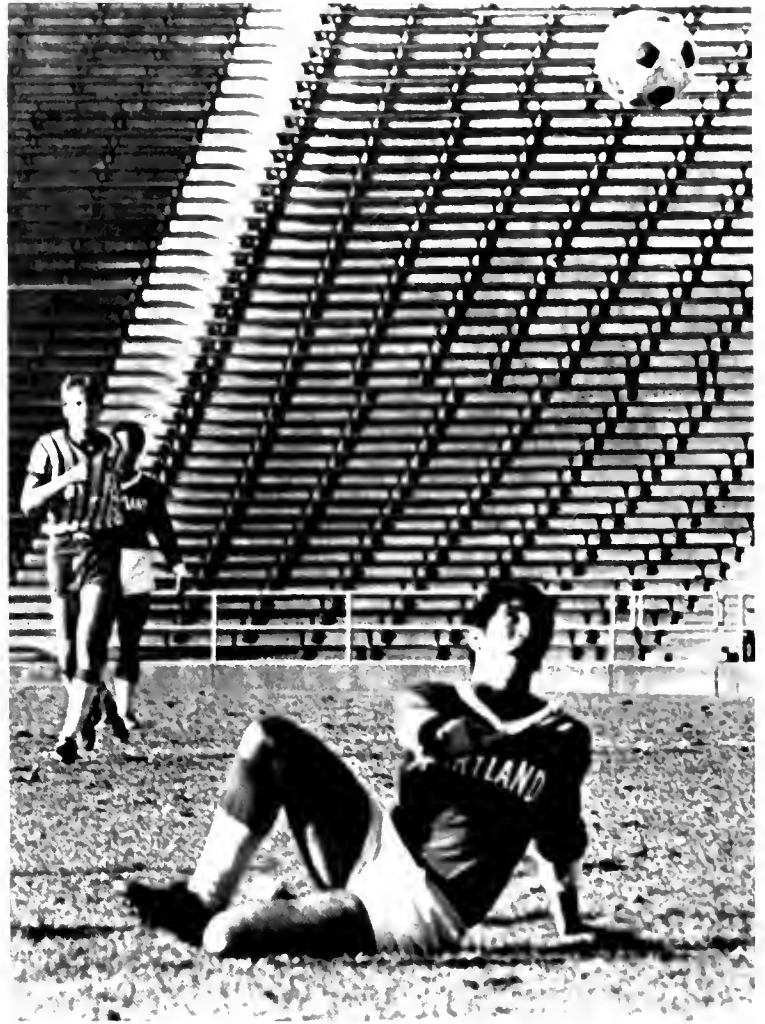

These men will, of course, be missed, but the fact that so many return next season can only paint an optimistic picture for Maryland to retain its number one ranking in 1969.

Basketball

This season the University Basketball team traveled a long, hard road only to find disappointment and frustration at its end. But even as the Terps spent most of the 1968-69 season in or near the Atlantic Coast Conference cellar, a fast moving brand of never-say-die basketball was presented.

Despite its losing record, Maryland had several notable wins during the season. Previously unbeaten George Washington University fell in upset to the scrappy cagers. In turning back Marshall, defending champion of its own tournament, just before Christmas and defeating Wichita in the Charlotte Invitational, Maryland proved it was capable of winning against some of the country's finest teams.

North Carolina, ranked third nationally, and the highly touted South Carolina Gamecocks barely escaped upset at the hands of the Terps, with the Tar Heels overcoming a twenty point deficit to win in the final two seconds of the game.

Although the cagers have played somewhat inconsistently this season, Will Hetzel and Pete Johnson have both contributed rock-like performances.

A serious, hard working junior, Hetzel leads Maryland players in just about every category. After the first 23 games, he had been over the 20 point mark 13 times, had two 34 point games back to back, against Duke and Clemson, and had sank approximately 43 percent of his field goal attempts. While averaging 12 rebounds a game, Will scored 79 percent from the foul line.

Maintaining his steady offensive production, every point brings him closer to the University's all-time scoring record of 1,397 points, currently held by Gene Shue, coach of the Baltimore Bullets. Besides making the All-Tournament teams of both the Charlotteville and Marshall Invitational tournaments, Will has joined the elite group of Maryland's top ten all-time scorers. Praising his serious candidate for All-ACC honors, head Coach Frank Fellows commented; "A coach couldn't ask for more from any player."

Complimenting Hetzel's outstanding play, Pete "the rabbit" Johnson is famous for his intimidation of players much taller than himself. Last year's leading scorer, the 6-0 senior moved into sixth place among the all-time Maryland scorers after his fantastic performance in Maryland's second meeting with North Carolina.

Possibly in what was one of the finest games of his career; Johnson scored 28 points against the tough Tor Heel five and sparked the Terps to a near upset. Playing in his last game in Cole Field House, Pete closed out a colorful era in Maryland basketball.

This year Cooch Fellows received a pleasant surprise in the likes of post Domatha great Mickey Wiles. A transfer from Georgia, Mickey broke into the starting lineup early and was not to be replaced. The flashy guard took over as quarterback on the floor, allowing Pete Johnson to concentrate more on his shooting, and engineered many of the team's fast breaks.

A contribution from the Freshmen team last year, Dick Worthington had a lot to learn. His patience and hard work paid dividends the entire season and earned him a starting position on the Terp's squad. The 6-6 sophomore, possibly the best leaper on the team, led the freshmen last year in rebounds.

Tom Milroy, playing the other guard position, averaged 47 percent early in the season, leading the team to early victories. An auto accident sidelined Milroy part way through the season but gained recognition for his quick recovery and strong comeback.

The likes of Rod Horst has made Maryland's offense click. A dedicated, hard working junior, Rod emerged as a double figure scorer as he scored 28 points against second ranked North Carolina.

Dick Stobough broke into the starting lineup just before the Navy game. The 6-7 sophomore alternated with roommate Chuck Worthington for the all-important forward spot.

Junior Bill Sullivan sat out most of last season in academic trouble. The hustling Sullivan saw limited action on the inside this season.

Homer Warren, Roger Montgomery, and John MacDonald round out the rest of the Maryland Squad.

This has been a very disappointing year for players, coaches, and Maryland fans. The Terps record of 2-12 in the ACC did not give the fans much to cheer about.

Possibly the return of Will Hetzel, Mickey Wiles, Chuck Worthington and many others, all claiming one more year of experience can shorten the "long hard road" and bring basketball prominence back to the University.

Wrestling

Maryland wrestling, the essence of hard work, desire, and conditioning is possibly the most underrated sport at the University. The many hours of practice have paid off for this year's more experienced grapplers, and praise must be given to a team that well deserves it.

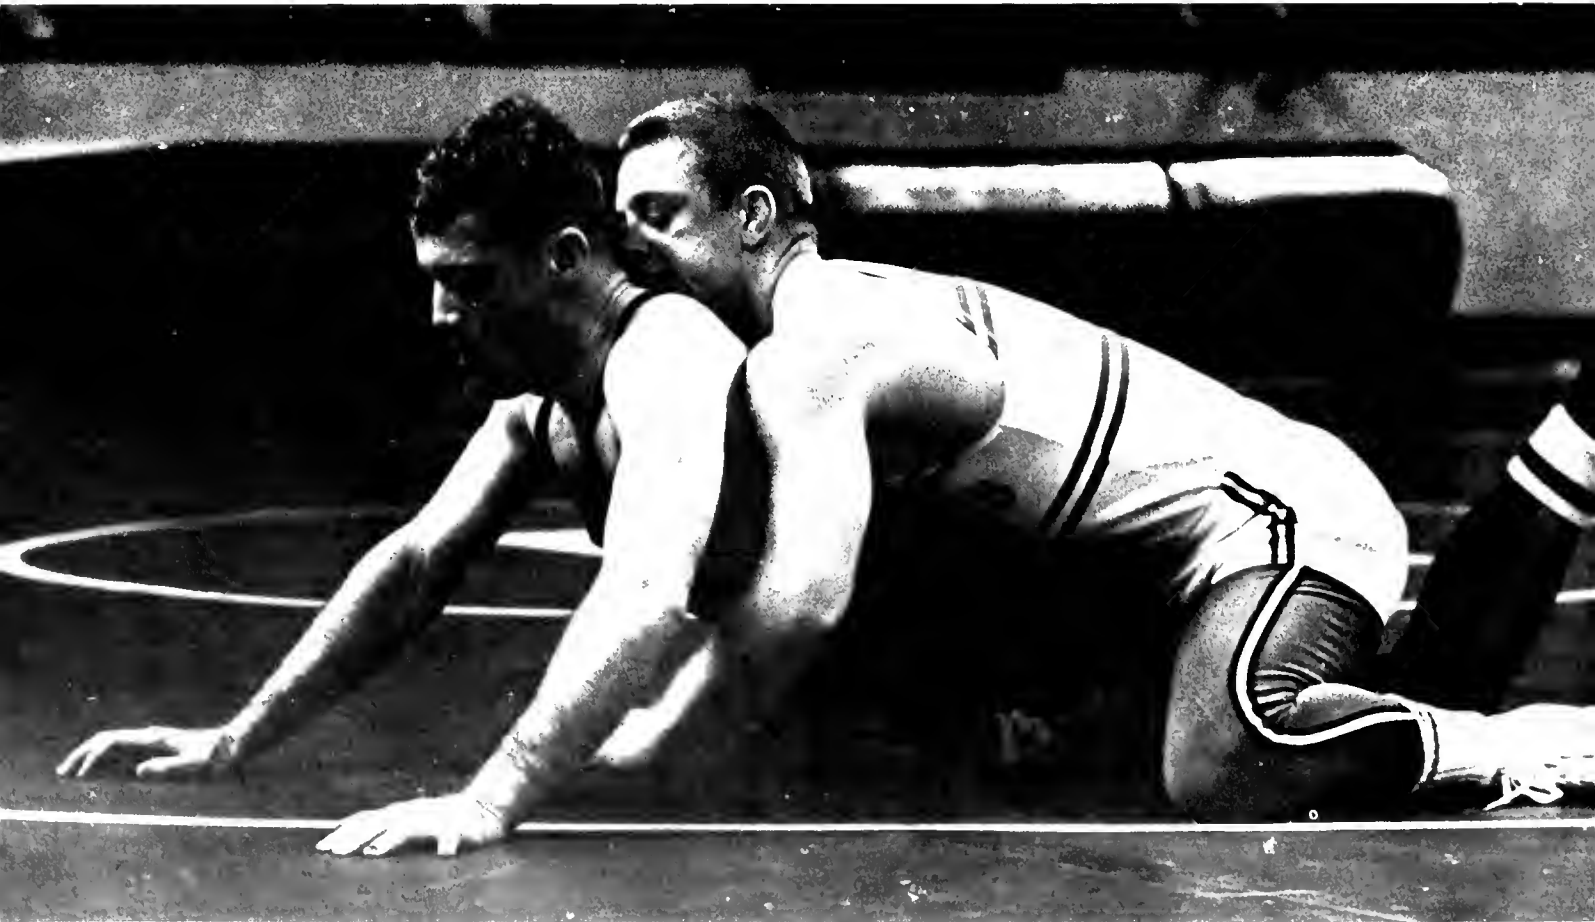

Led by senior co-captain Gabel Kline, the Maryland squad holds one of the toughest schedules in the East by facing teams like Michigan State, Army, Lehigh, Iowa State, Penn State and Pittsburg.

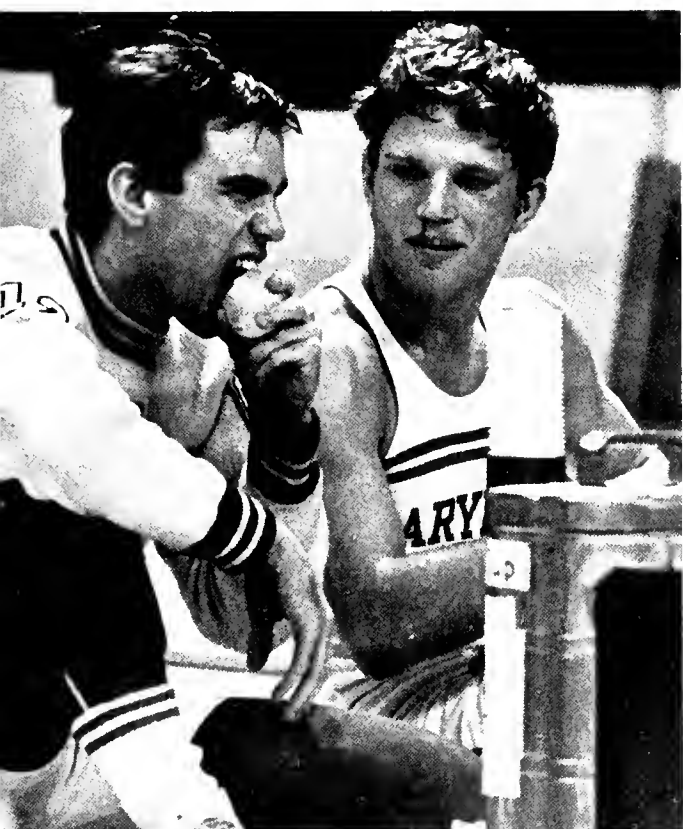

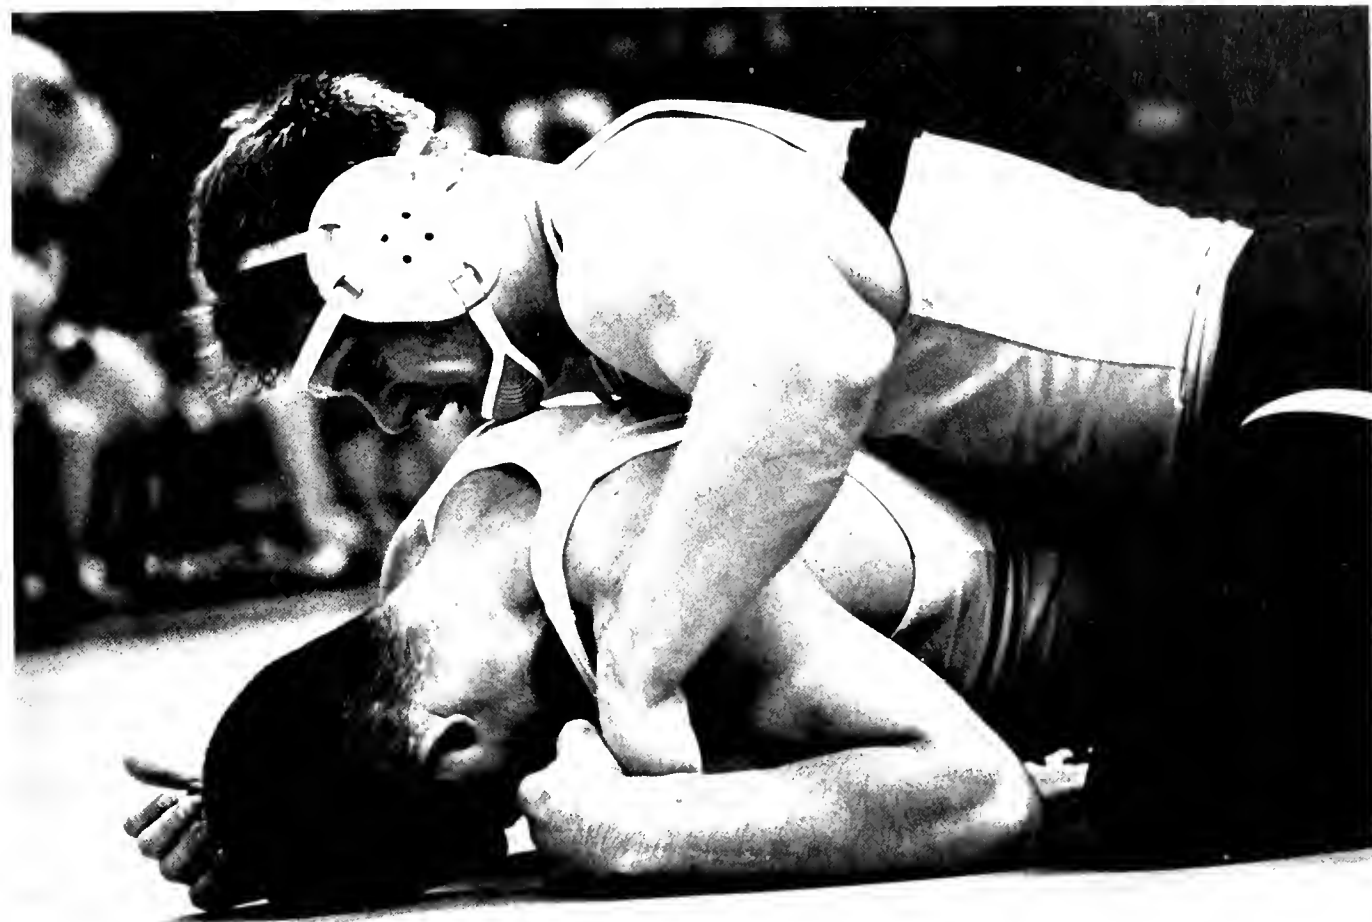

The All-American Kline will be out to better his 20-2 record of last year, when he finished 4th in the National Athletic Association finals.

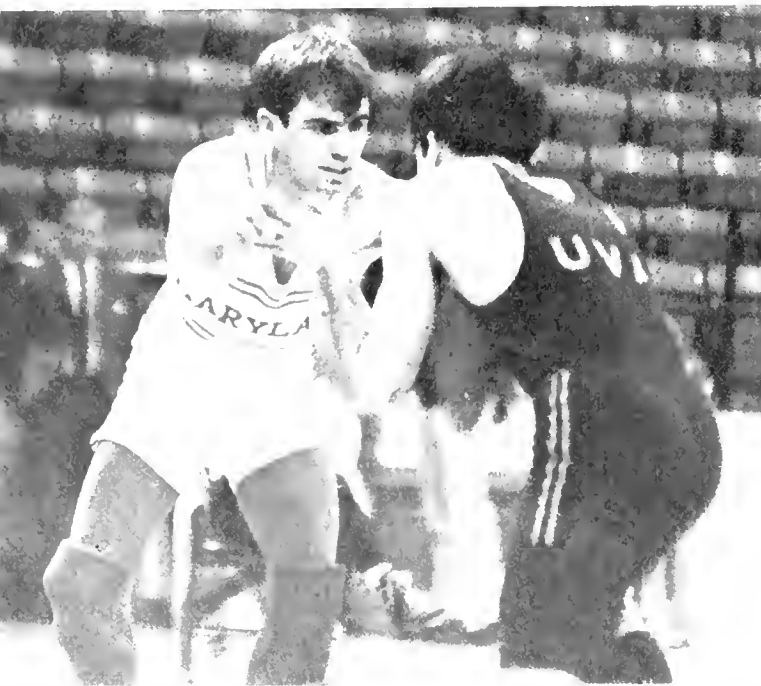

Honorable mention must be given to two other returnees, Curt Callahan and Bob Terrill, both stalwarts of last year's squad that finished 20th in the nation. Earlier this season, Callahan captured first in the East Strausberg Open while Terrill finished second in his weight class.

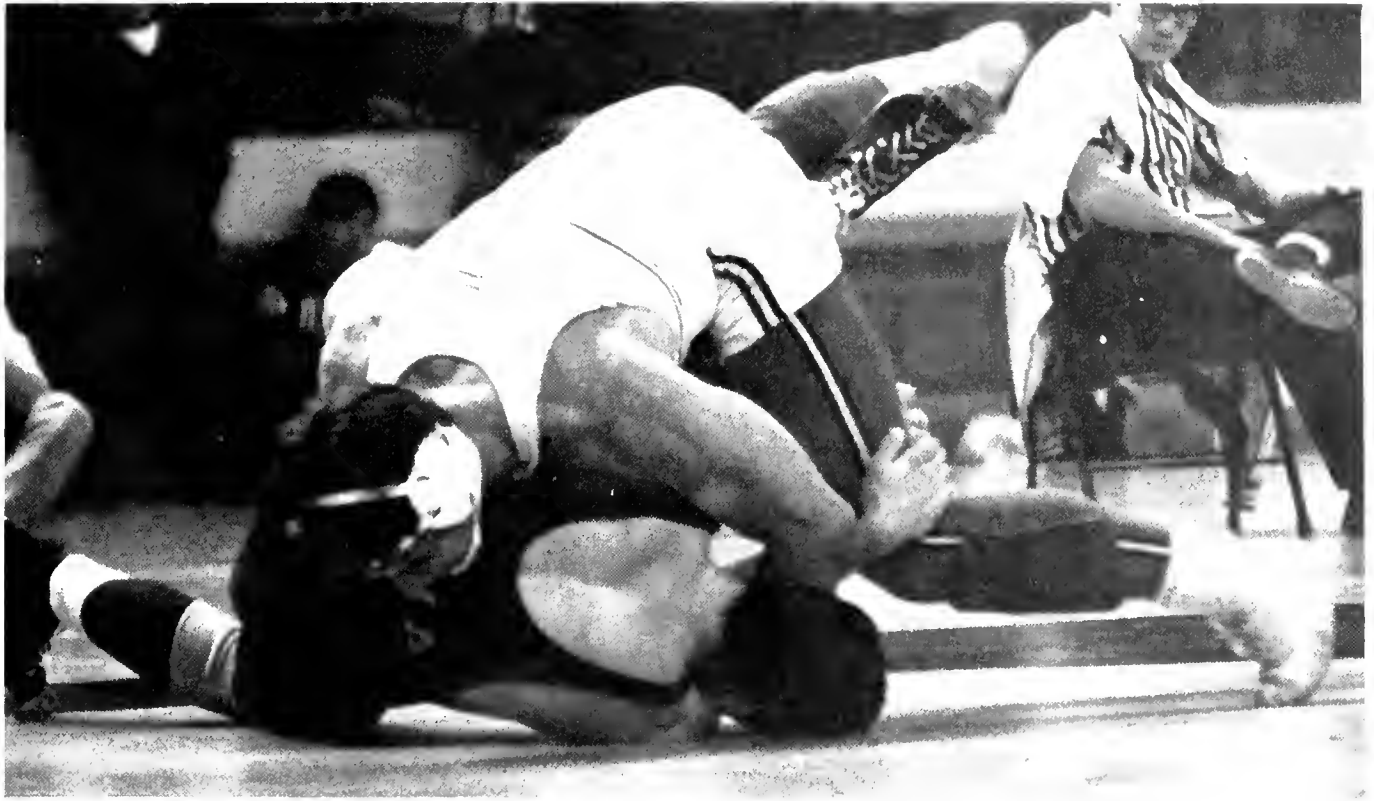

This year's squad consists of; 123 lb. Bob Terrill, John Baker; 130 lb. Dave Reese; 137 lb. Kevin Gilead; 145 lb. Curt Callahan; 152 lb. Gobel Kline; 160 lb. Joel Haan; 167 lb. Andy Hanzlik, Dan Sisemore; 177 lb. Randy Umberger; 191 lb. Howard Zachman and Heavyweight Ralph Sonntag.

Noting the dedication of his wrestlers coach William "Sully" Krause commented, "My wrestlers this year have worked as hard as any team I have ever coached." This is evident in all Terp matches, win, lose, or draw.

Swimming

Tagged during pre-season with the label of mediocrity, Maryland's swimming team has taken great strides to overcome this stigma and may well be on their way to an Atlantic Coast Conference title.

This year, more than ever, the overall development of the team has depended on the development of its freshmen swimmers. Graduation of top swimmers such as Doug Springer, Jerry Hill, Bruce Alston and Doug Dodge took the heart from last year's squad.

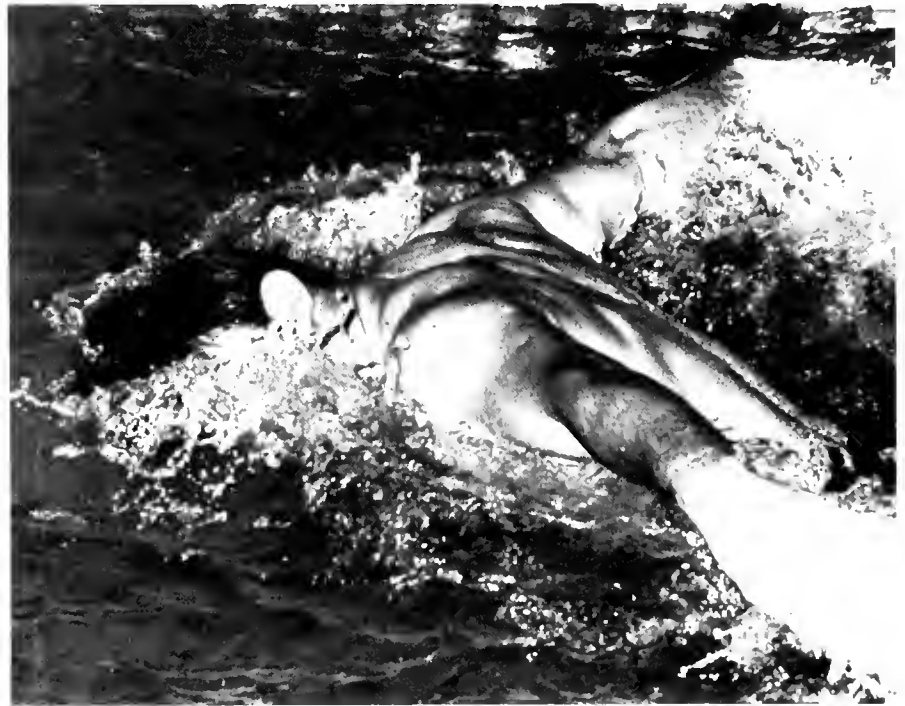

There are several good prospects from the freshmen team capable of swimming on the first team, the best prospects being Gary Goodner, Paul McDonald and Dave Hines. Coach Bill Campbell must rely heavily on these freshmen to replace the graduates.

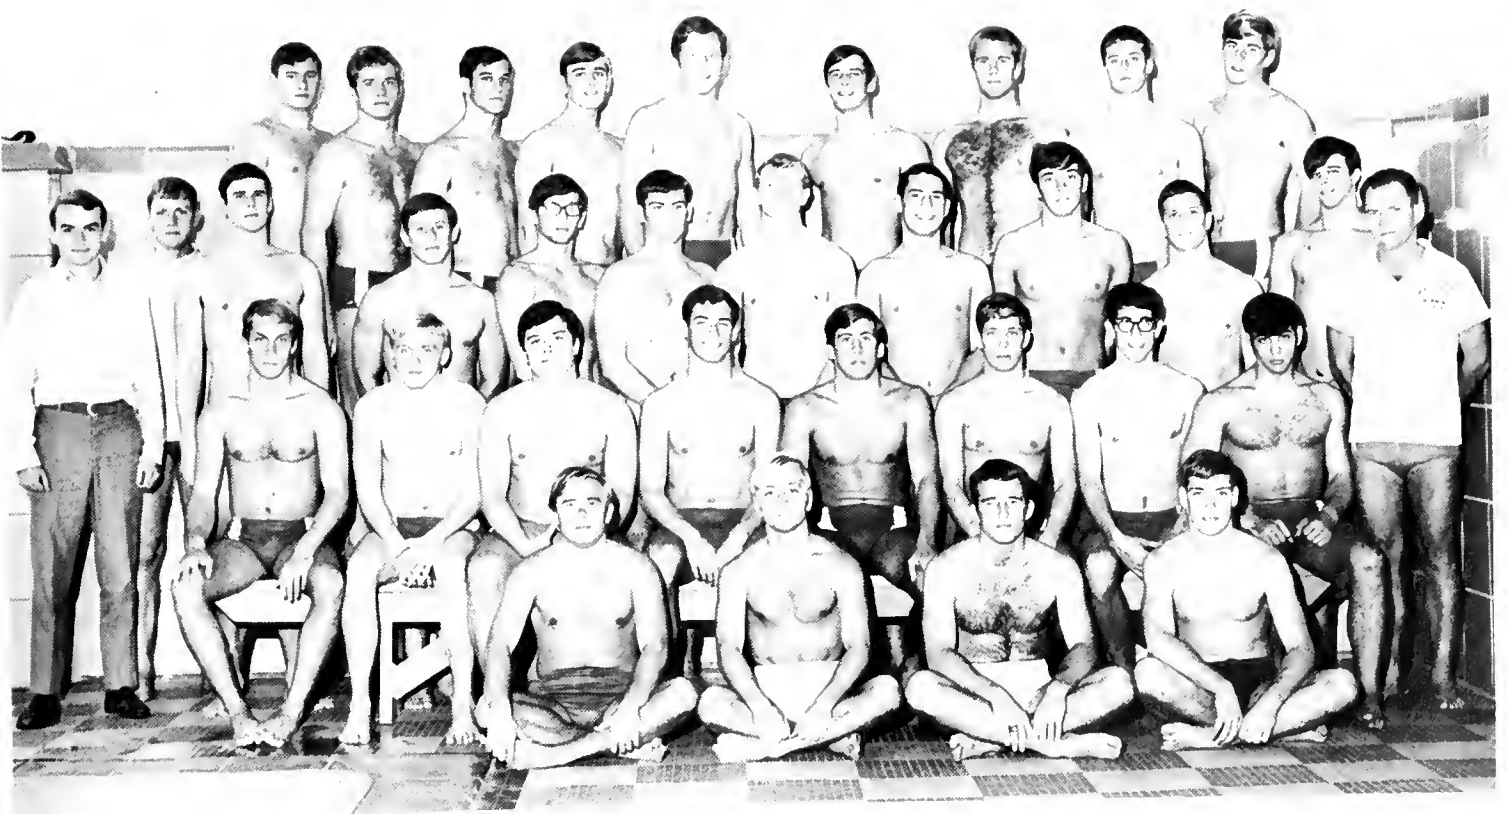

Short on experienced swimmers, Campbell started from the bottom and took time to find his best material. His patience and persistence have produced such varsity standouts as Paul McDonald, olympian Gary Goodner, Barry Accorner and Charles Hoffman.

The real stalwarts of the team are the returnees from last year's squad. Dove Heim, one of the best distance men on the East Coast, acts as the big gun for Maryland. The strong swimming Heim was awarded the Atlantic Coast Conference distance title. Others returning for the 1968 season are Joe Schwartzel, Mike Golub, Steve Meleski, and co-captain Bob Sikorski.

Their first hour came in the meet with Penn State as they crushed the opponents 73-39, setting eight pool records. Three were broken by Ron Brillhart and Ron Hoffman, appearing in their first meet of the year after missing action due to eligibility rules.

Future predictions can only be optimistic considering the rapid development made by the younger members of this year's squad.

Cross Country

Cross country, one of the most underrated sports at the University, continued its domination of the Atlantic Coast Conference by winning its fifth straight title.

Charlie Shrader, finishing first, led the team through the entire season. Each race seemed to be a toss-up between Shrader or John Baker, last year's freshmen sensation. The combination of Baker — Shrader continually buried other colleges.

This year's team was one of great determination and courage. Russ Taintor, talented freshman, never gave up hopes of running during his battle with mono. John Baker returned after a painful leg injury to claim his top position. Outstanding effort marked this team for success.

Much credit must be given to Coach Jim Kehoe for his great recruiting program. Each year, Maryland gets some of the best high school runners in the nation. This influx keeps the runners on their toes and offers great intersquad competition.

The team was strengthened by several outstanding freshmen. Among them were Jim Rosen, Russ Taintor, Sheldon Karlin and Don Camero.

Veterans of Terp harriers in the thick of competition all year long were Charlie Shrader, John Baker, Morty Brotemarkle, Ernie O'Boyle, and George Minarik.

The highlight of the undefeated season was the swamping of the midshipmen from the Naval Academy. Going into the meet with several men hampered by aggravating injuries, the Terps came away with an overwhelming victory.

The future of the Maryland cross country team seems to be in good hands with the majority of the team returning again next year to bring glory to their school.

Cross Country

Jim Kehoe, Maryland track coach and newly appointed athletic director is two-thirds of the way towards another Atlantic Coast Conference track triple crown. This coveted crown consists of Cross Country, Indoor and Outdoor Track, three of Maryland's specialties.

Last year's indoor season reached climax with the indoor conference title meet in which Maryland captured five individual titles, one relay title, established two meet records and clinched its 13th straight ACC championship.

Individual winners included George Wojtech, 600 yd., Roland Merritt, 60; Tom Gogner, Pole Vault; Frank Costello, high jump; Jack Hanley, Shot Put, John Baker, and the two mile relay team.

The outdoor season, beginning with the Florida Relays saw the two mile relay team capture a third and establish a new University record.

During the South Carolina Relays at Columbia, the Terps performed well and won the dual meet with North Carolina. Resuming the southern tour after crushing Navy in a dual meet 118-27, Maryland scored victories in the Columbia Relays and posted a fair showing at the Quontico Relays.

Highlighting the entire season was the ACC Championships. Completely dominating the event, Maryland won nine out of a possible seventeen ACC events. In the process, the tracksters broke six conference and two University records, while capturing their 17th straight conference championship.

To finish her very successful campaign, Maryland's track team defeated powerful Villanova, holders of the national indoor track championship in a season-ending dual meet in 1968.

Maryland has made it known to all that once again she will field another powerhouse this year by crushing the Naval Academy in their annual encounter. Kehoe's track machine placed first in all 12 events held in the meet.

This season the Terps will once again rely on the speed of Roland Merritt, 60 yard IC4A Champion. Rolph Jones will add that much needed punch the sprint department needs.

John Baker, who has run a metric mile equivalent of a four minute mile will hold down the distance events while the shorter races go to George Wojtech and Jim Meehan. Wojtech handles the 600 yard and Meehan runs the 1000 yarder.

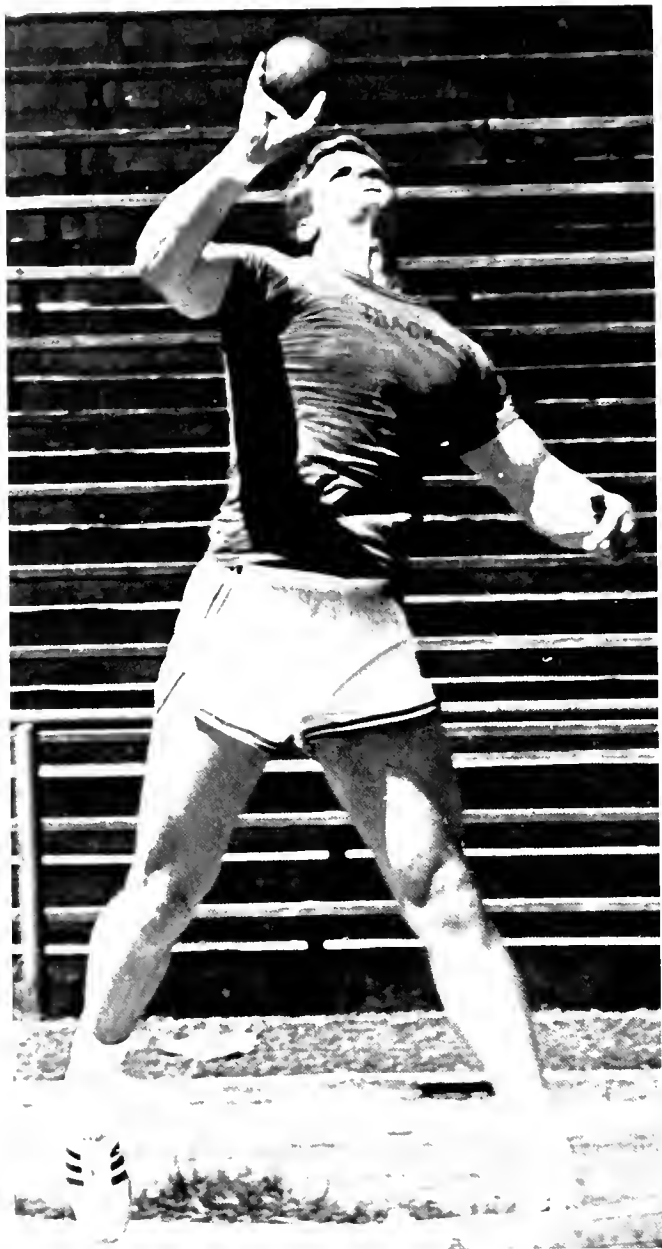

The grueling two-mile run is adequately handled by ACC Cross Country champion Charlie Shrader along with Russ Trainor, a sophomore.

Members of the all-important one mile relay include George Wojtech, Roland Merritt, Jim Colhoun and Ernie O'Keefe. Maryland's two mile team is composed of John Baker, Jim Meehan, Ernie O'Boyle, Marty Brotemorkle and George Minorik.

In the field events, Rich Drescher will handle the discuss while Jack Hanley will put the shot. John Williamson competes in the pole vault, in which he has already set the Navy Fieldhouse record. Elliot Gorrett more than adequately handles the long jump along with John David in the high jump.

Again this season the Maryland track team enjoys the depth and balance that has allowed it to excel in Cross Country and Indoor track, and looks forward to excellence during the outdoor campaign.

Lacrosse

Lacrosse, though not as well known as most college sports, offers an exciting brand of fast, rough and tumble action. The University of Maryland, in keeping with these standards, consistently fields one of the finest teams in the nation.

This season, coaches John "Hezzie" Howard and Rennie Smith were faced with the unavoidable problem of rebuilding the Maryland attack. Although All-American Steve LaVaute was returning, replacing the likes of Alan Lowe and Jack Heim was not easy. They had to look no further than the midfield, and quickly converted Doug Carter from middle to attackman. While taking the pressure off LaVaute, Carter added that needed punch and finished in scoring. LaVaute despite injury, has his usual brilliant season, this one being his last.

Maryland had the makings of a championship team simply because of the large number of returnees from last year's squad. This fact alone that Maryland had depth in most positions, especially midfield, opened the door to a successful campaign. Starting the season all wrong, the Terps were tied by Princeton and in the process lost star attackman Bart Ellinger. The sloppy play indicated that much work was still needed if they planned to contend for a second straight national title.

Several reasons for the team's future victories were veteran midfielders Steve Pfeiffer, Bruce Hinkle, and Charlie Liembach, all playing in their last season. Hinkle consistently came up with the crucial faceoffs while Liembach, always close at hand gave assistance anywhere it was needed. The steady play of Steve Pfeiffer was significant in his being chosen the only Terp for All-American honors. Bruce Picarillo, Reed Kaester and many others formed the tough midfield units, some of the best in the nation.

Tri champions last year, the Terps were denied individual honor because of their loss to Navy. Taking a 23-2-1 record and a perfect season into the clash with the midshipmen, Maryland gained its 24th win, the first over Navy in nine years.

Five different Terps scored goals in this tough defensive battle which saw outstanding defensemen Hugh Mallon, Jack Daily and Craig Hubbard limit the Middies to only three goals. Terp goalie Norm Vanderschuyt proved himself to be one of the best in the country with his performance around the nets.

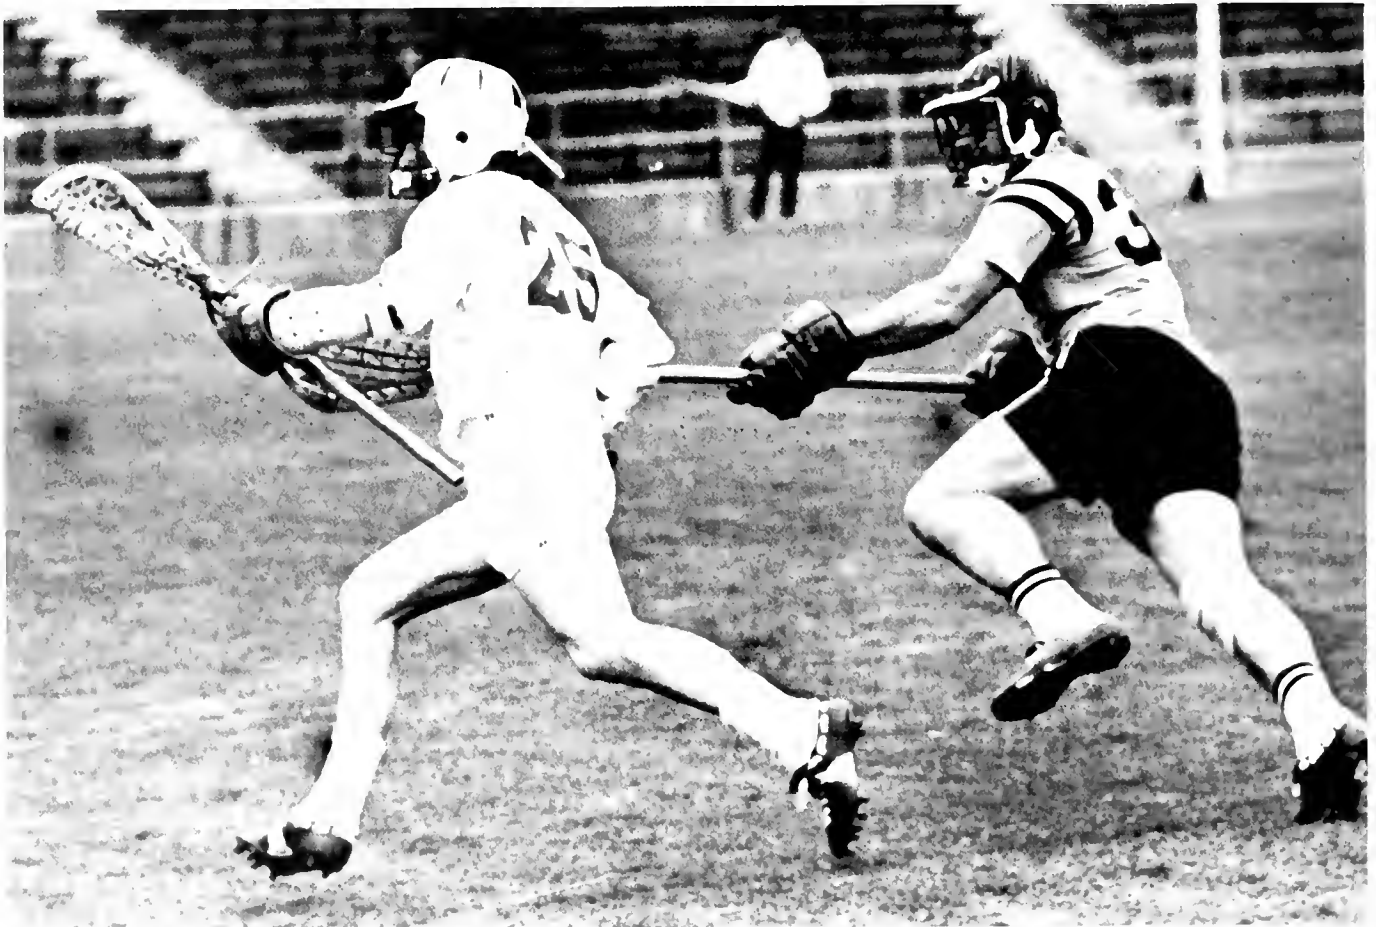

Beating Navy was the high point of the season for the team as well as happy coach Howard. Commenting on the outcome of the rest of the season Howard concluded, "We beat them—and to me that represents a successful season."

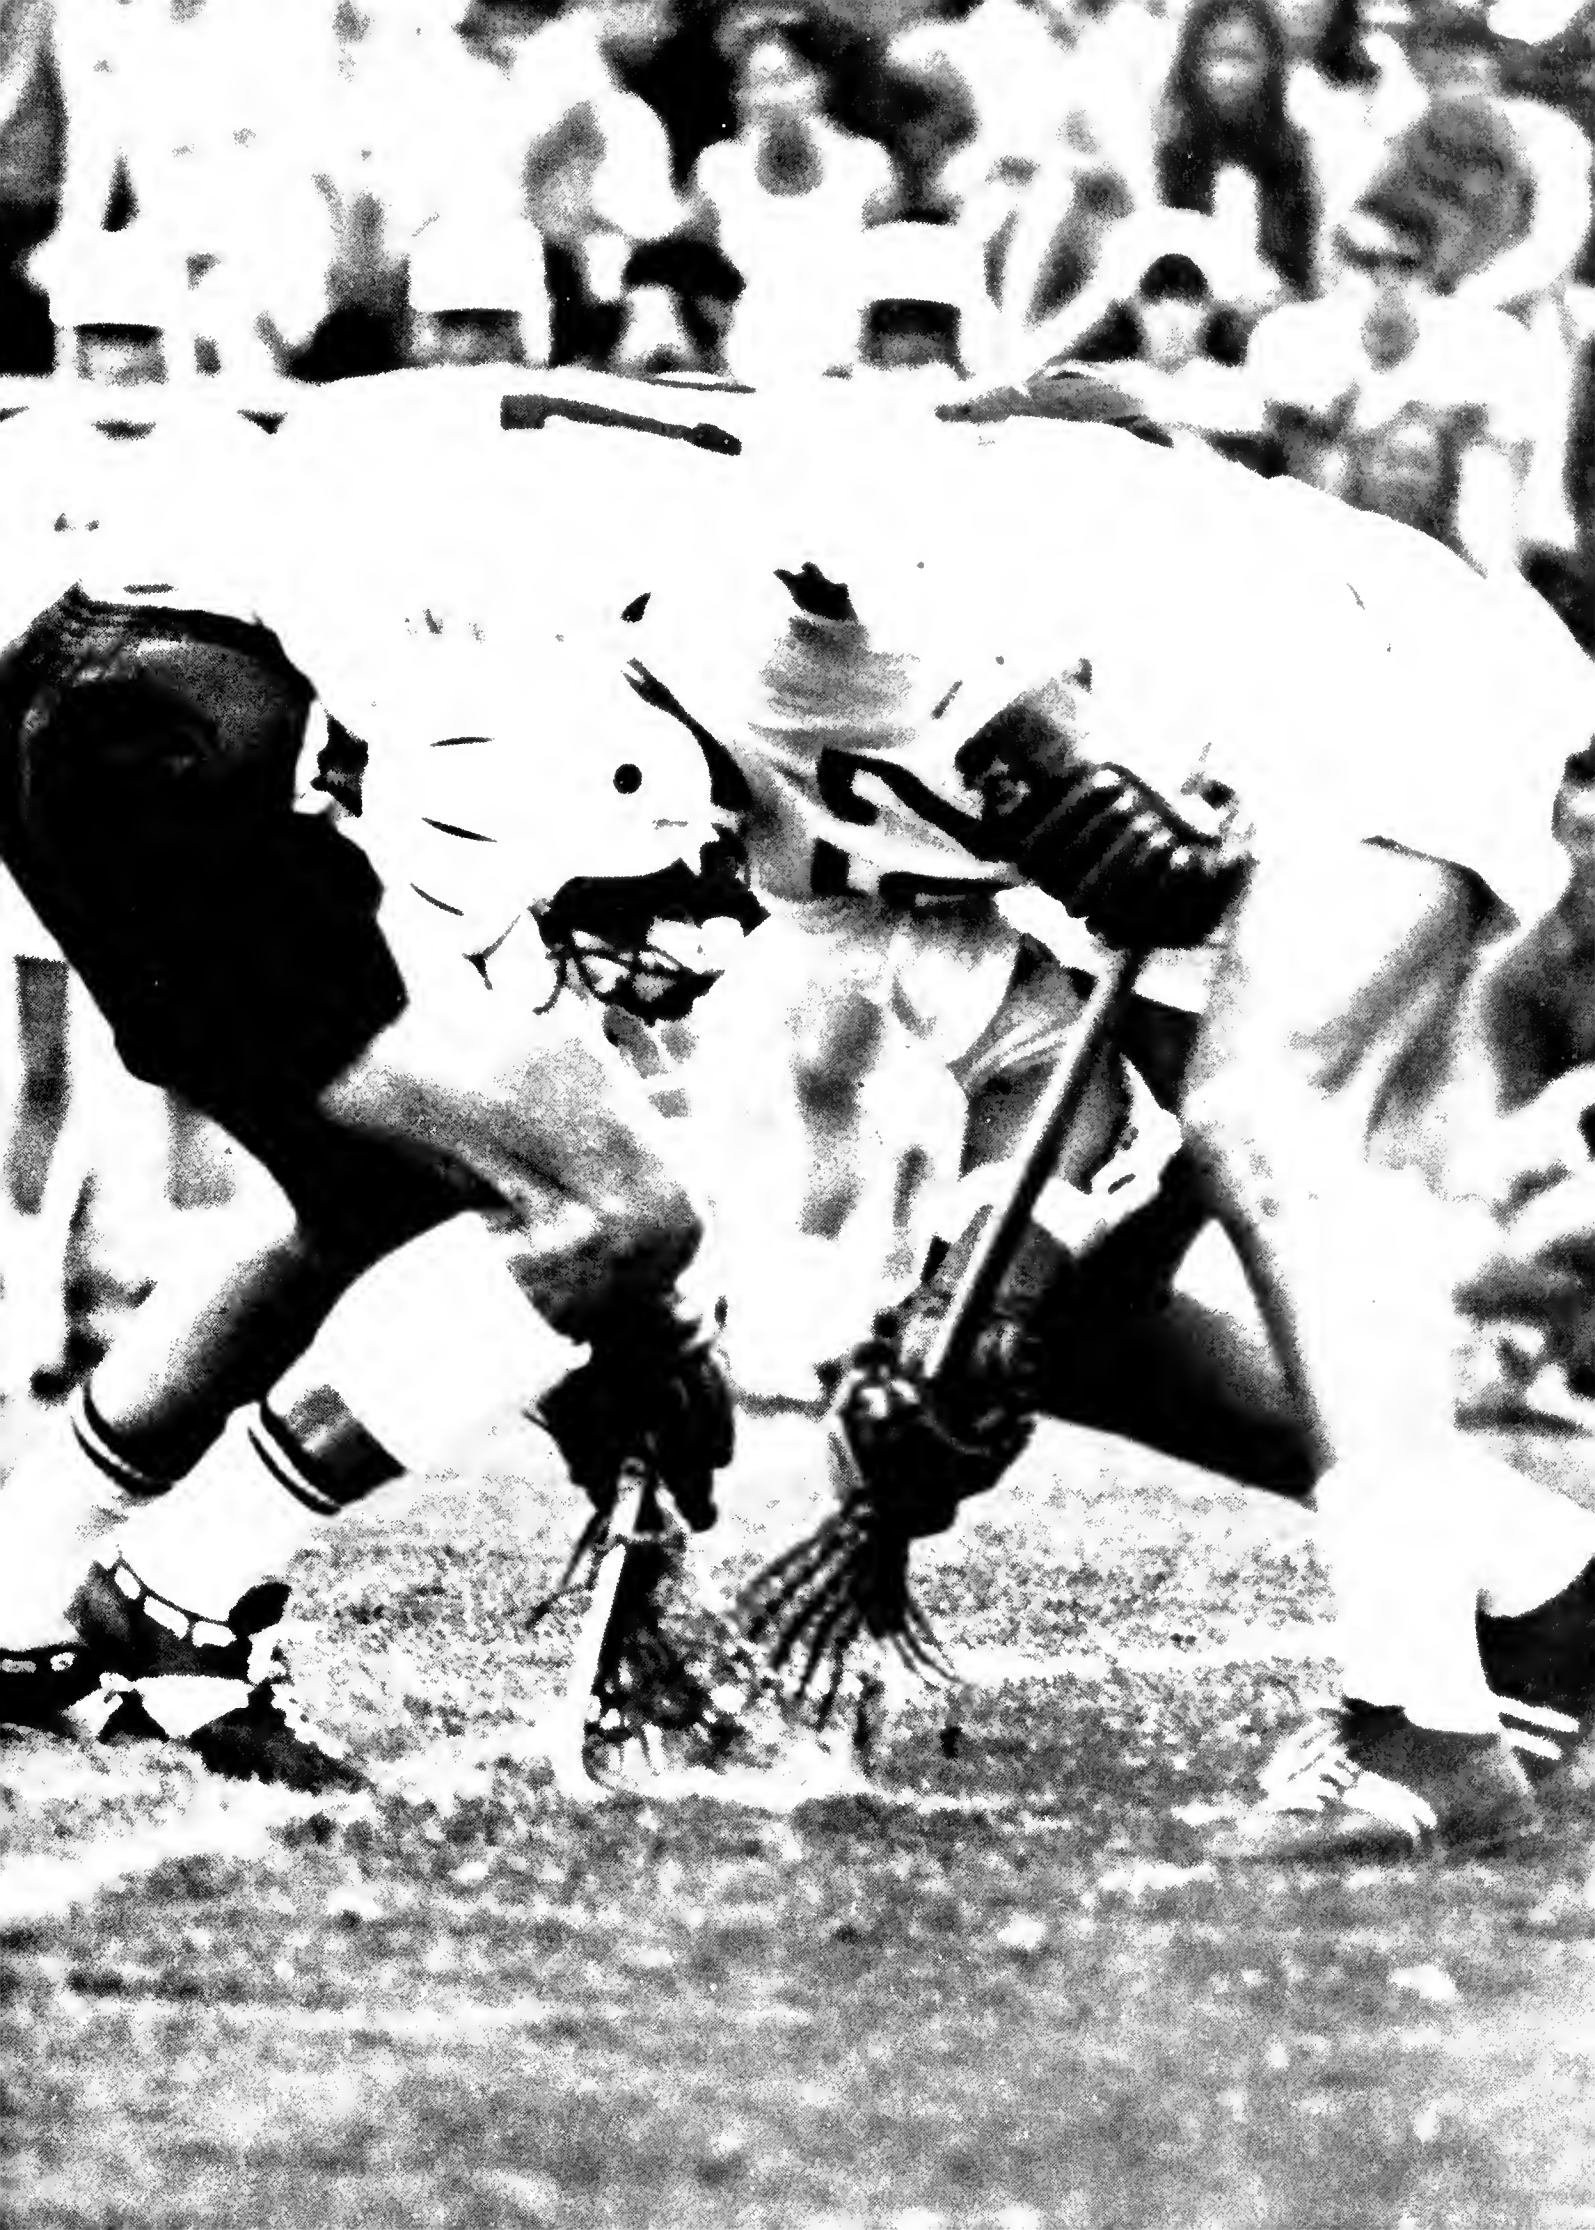

Convincing victories over North Carolina and Virginia gave the stickers the Atlantic Coast Conference title. The only thing standing between them and the national championship was Johns Hopkins, who the Terps had beaten last year to gain a share of the coveted crown.

The victory over Virginia had been costly, leaving the team physically beaten and without the services of defenseman Craig Hubbard. On May 18, 1968, the Terps dropped from the ranks of the undefeated by losing to a fired up Johns Hopkins eleven, 10-8. They had come so close yet now were so far away.

It had been an uphill struggle the entire season with numerous injuries to key players keeping the Terps from reaching full effectiveness, yet they finished second in the nation. This is truly a tribute to the many hard fighting Maryland players and determined coaches who operate in the game of intercollegiate lacrosse.

In addition to first team All-American honors presented Steve Pfeiffer, several team members made the second team. These were goalie Norm Vanderschuyt, defenseman Hugh Mallon, midfielder Charlie Liembach and attackman Steve LaVaute. Two others received honorable mention.

Baseball

Despite a 2-1 loss to Penn State in their season's finale, the University Diamondmen, under the watchful eye of head coach, Jack Jackson, compiled the best record of any Terp nine in history.

The outstanding record of nineteen wins, six losses, and one tie resulted in a .731 percentage, thus surpassing that of the 1950 team whose 20-8 record was good for .714. During this 1968 season, five of the six games lost were by one run, while the sixth was by two runs.

This year's team had strength in both offense and defense, with major contributions coming from the highly talented pitching staff. Two big winners were juniors Mike Herson (5-0) and Tom Bradley (5-2). Other top notch performances were turned in by George Manz (4-2) and Mark Harris (1-1) both seniors.

Ranked as one of the best in the nation, the pitching staff had the lowest Earned Run Average in the entire country. The staff also boasts of three men signing professional contracts. They are Mike Herson, George Manz, and Tom Bradley.

The team as a whole, led by freshman outfielder Jim Norris, batted .285. Norris, a native of Seaford, Long Island, hit .421 for 21 games. This was good enough to get him the Atlantic Coast Conference batting crown and made the first .400 hitter since Jim Pitt, who set an ACC batting record with a .460 average in 1964. Other players swinging big bats were Gene Hiser (.299) and Bob Simpson (.287).

Except for North Carolina which nipped the Terps in both games of a double-header here on May 11, (1-0) and (2-1), Maryland took its three game series with every conference rival it played. Compiling an ACC record of 12-5-1, the Terps finished in third place.

Tennis

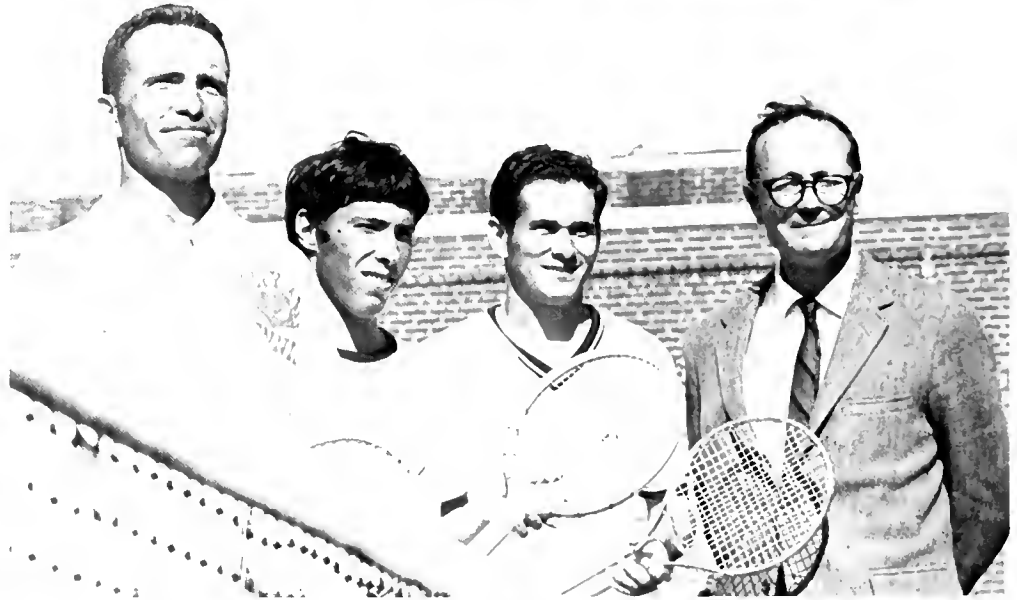

After finishing a season of thirteen victories with only three defeats, most coaches would have been more than hoppy. Not so with Doyle Royol, head tennis coach at the University. His team's exceptional record was only good enough to secure third place in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

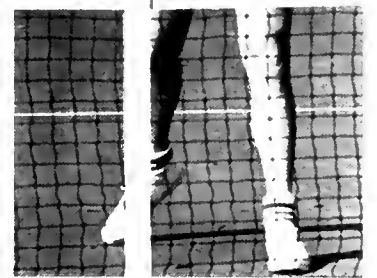

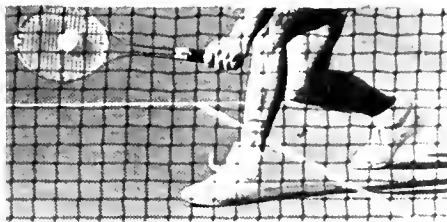

The netmen made an early show of strength in the Cherry Blossom Tournament held on their home court. During the entire three days of competition, Maryland did not loose a single set.

Individual effort the essence of victory, is an area where John Schaffer, leader of the young Terps, excelled. Playing out of his number one seeded position, Schaffer had trouble reaching his potential but teamed up with second seed Dave Werchen to take the number one doubles match during the past season ACC tournament.

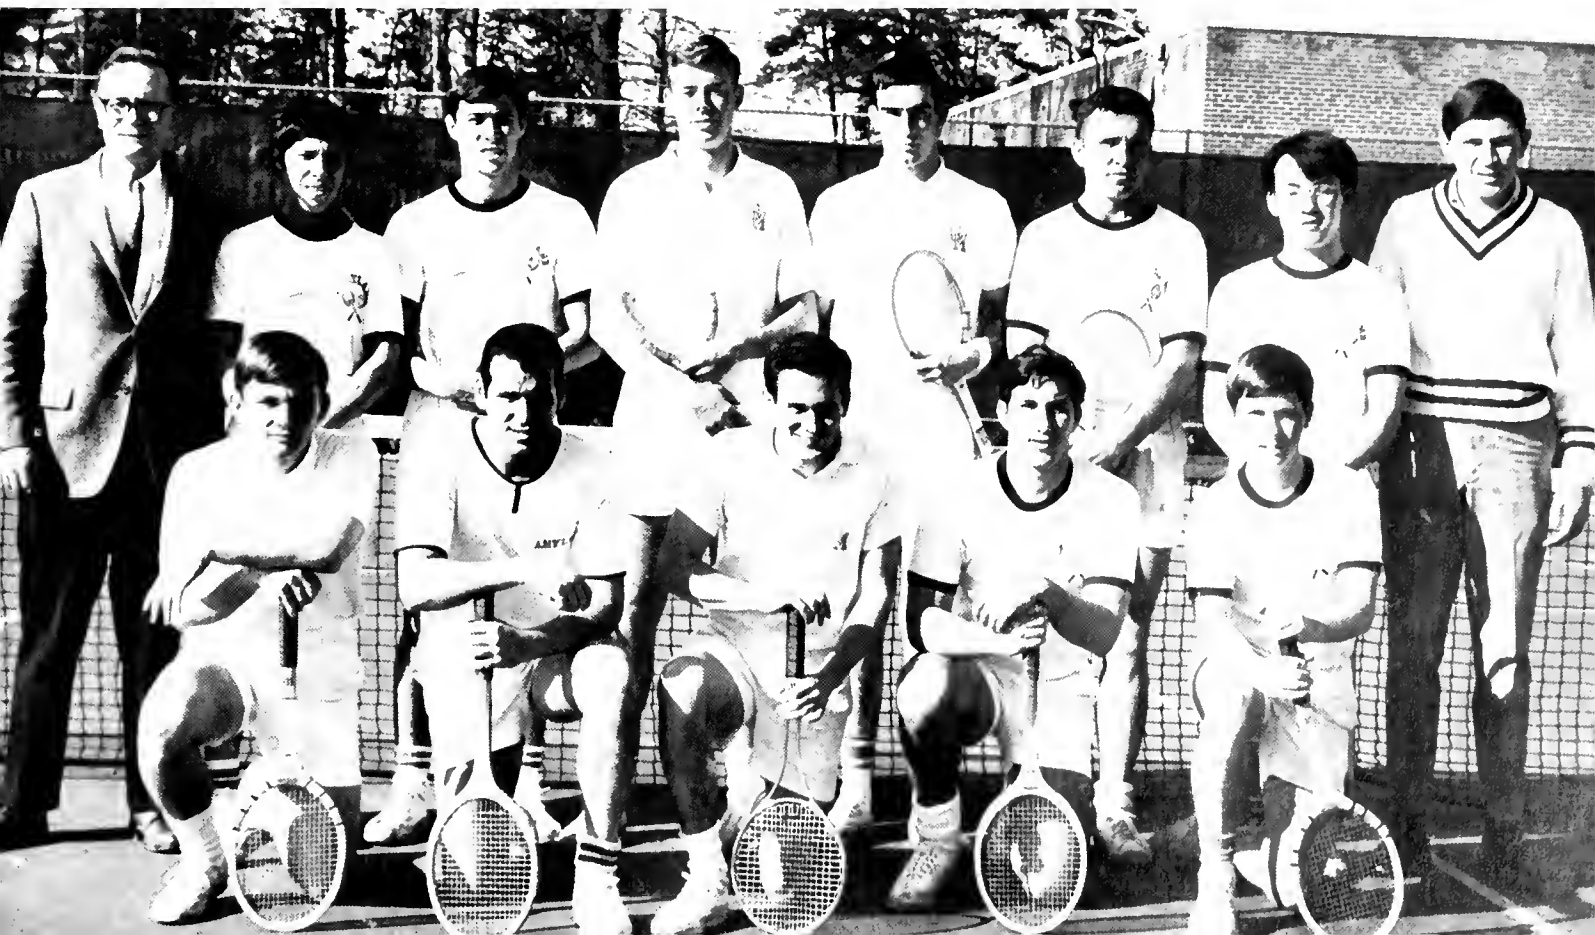

Third seeded Nick Mackoranko, only a freshman truly was the outstanding player of the 1969 season. While losing only one match the entire season, Nick has the distinction of being the only Terp to take a singles title in the ACC.

Considering the stellar performances turned in by all Terp netmen this past season, the 1969 campaign should develop a banner year, especially since they don't lose a single member from the top six!

Golf

Pre-season predictions calling for the 1968 golf team to be one of the most talented and exciting in the University's history were well on their way toward realization even before the start of the season itself. An overabundance of talent was directly responsible for several experienced players of past years' teams failing to make the cut during the trial rounds held in Spring.

The squad finally chosen to represent the University exhibited experience with Tom Medlin, Henri de Lozier, and the very talented Tom Walsh. Three other teammates, Bill Ziobro, Brian Willard and hard-hitting Charlie Zink added maturity and leadership with their tournament knowledge. Waiting to draw on this experience and knowledge were two outstanding freshmen golfers, Mike Micko and Bill Colfee.

Excellent individual efforts during the entire season resulted in a third place finish in the Atlantic Coast Conference, possibly one of the strongest golf conferences in the nation. Despite the fact that only two matches were played on the home course, Maryland golfers still managed to win 8 of their 12 matches, finishing the year with a 4-4 record in the ACC.

Outstanding performer for the Terps was Brian Willard, leader in the best individual round average and fourth place title holder in the ACC championships. Bill Ziobro and Bill Colfee also excelled in steady play.

With six of eight matches scheduled on the home course in 1969 and several returnees from last year's squad, Coaches Frank Cronin and Barry Rodenhover are looking ahead to this coming season with great interest.

Student Life

Commuters

The car is the symbol of American mobility. It is also the symbol of the Maryland commuter. A stereotype perhaps—but it's impossible to stereotype the diversity of Maryland's 18,000 commuters.

Cramming in the library. Debate in front of Taliaferro. A Macke lunch. A few rays on the mall. A nap in the car. Quiet conversations over Union pizza. But more—

The University Commuters Association has a big job: trying to draw the group together. Making a mosaic out of the bits and pieces. How do they do it? The Year of the Moose. Auto rallies. Car pools. Touch football. Coffee House. Commuter's Den. At the current time it reaches only a small segment of the off campus population, but it's grasping for more. Frustration for some, but involvement for those who want it.

The Playboy Bunnies are the capstone of the UCA social season. Bunnies. Soul Music. Bunnies. Fun. Bunnies . . .

At the end of the day there's still the long ride home. The apartment. Serves as the cure-all and panacea for dining hall refugees and Greeks who can't study. Yet apartment living has its own, unique problems —

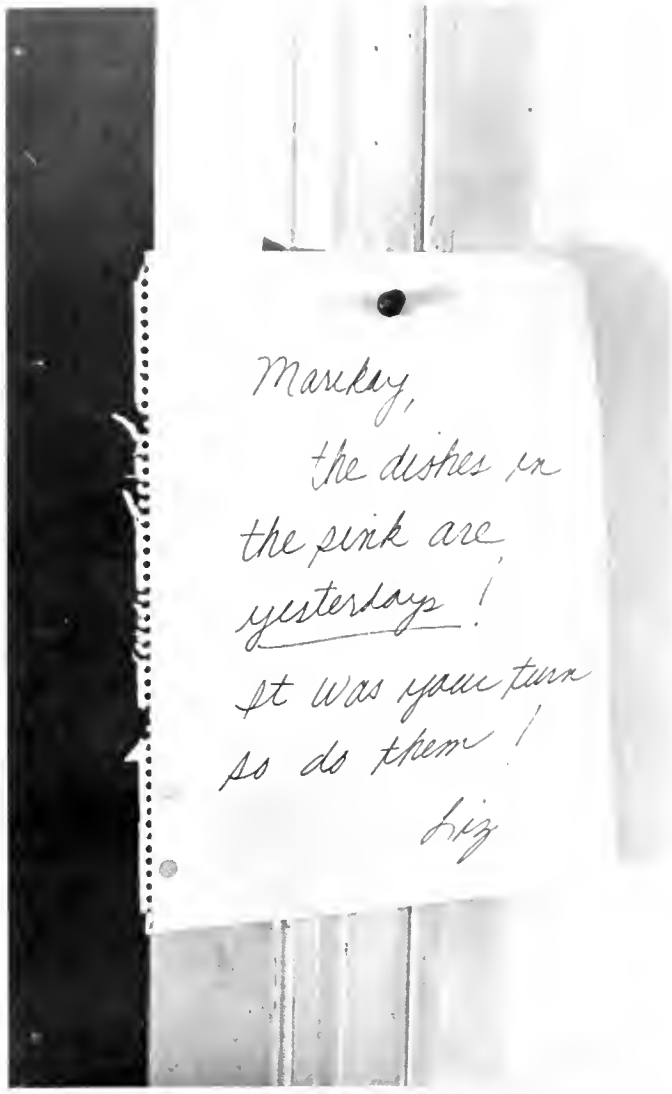

Most of the problems stem from keeping house. Dividing the work. Meals: TV dinners and McDonald's may help—in a frenzy of domesticity one might even see a homecooked dinner. The eternal stock of dishes—usually unwashed.

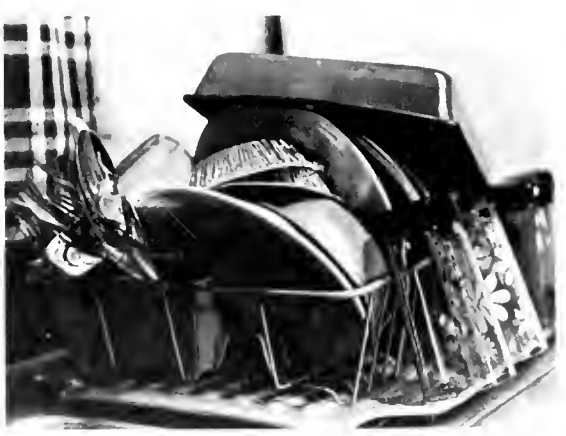

A place to entertain – a quiet dinner, a cocktail party. A different way of life – maybe better, maybe worse – but different.

Markey,
the dishes in the sink are yesterday's!
It was your turn
so do them!
Liz

Not all commuters live in apartments. There's always home. Parents. Family. give and take. Remnants of curfew and trying to prove that you're an adult. Easy for some. A trial for others. Another facet of the commuter's world.

Apartment or home.
Campus and community.
Energy and apathy.
Compatibility and conflict.
Isolation and involvement.
The Maryland commuter.

Greeks

During the past year, the Greek system has been a study of contrast and controversy. Perhaps more has been written and discussed about fraternities and sororities this year than ever before. And, of course, there are always two sides to the story. But this year both sides have been brought out and debated forcefully, via the DBK, the Greek, fire-side chats, or just the bull session.

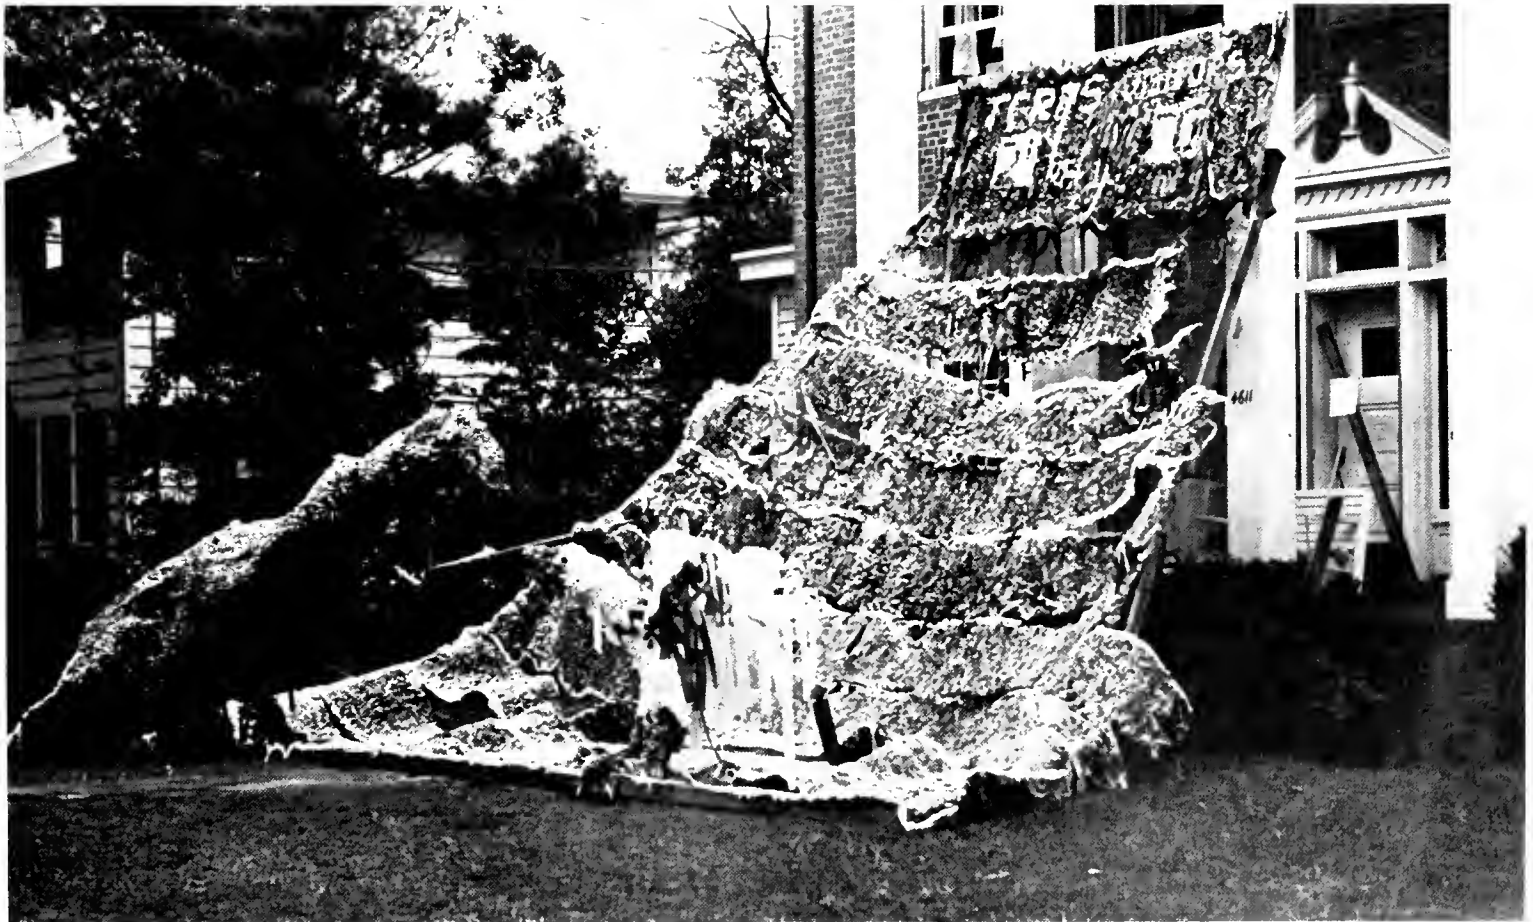

Fraternities and sororities are social organizations. On Friday and Saturday nights, fraternity parties provide a time to relax, unwind, and take a break from school. Whether it's a theme party with Bonnie & Clyde or a Christmas party with Santa Claus and presents, the Greeks enjoy the fun and fellowship which is part of what makes them brothers.

But "social" means more than parties and gifts. It also implies one's duty to others, and in this regard, Greeks sponsor many philanthropic and charity functions. Some houses have orphan parties at Christmas and Easter. Other provide financial support for clinics, charity, scholarships, or for a child in an underprivileged country. Still others organize community action projects, such as cleaning up College Park or building a playground in a low income area. Helping others is certainly a less publicized but major aspect of fraternity and sorority life.

Competition, another keynote of the Greek system, strengthens each house, and serves as a prime source of unity within each house as well. The pride of winning, the spirit generated by participating, together with the bond of brotherhood bring an intangible feeling of satisfaction which makes the work worthwhile. And yet organizations such as IFC and Panhel make it easy for the individual Greek houses to support the entire system.

Partying, yet helping; competing, yet supporting. These are all elements of Greek life at the University.

However, there are problems, too. No system is perfect. No system can ignore valid criticism.

The Greek system has been part of much controversy this year. Greeks have a heritage, a tradition. And this tradition is being challenged. Greeks are no longer isolated. Their off-campus "community" is no longer just a suburb of the University. Newer groups which do not have this tradition, question the system.

Other campus organizations have charged that Greeks are discriminating against blacks. The Campus Coalition Against Racism and University individuals are demanding that Greeks change their membership requirements, especially the black ball practice.

Much discussion has begun as a result of the changing attitudes both toward Greeks and among Greeks. But where all this will lead is, at present, a matter of conjecture. Nevertheless, all valid criticism and suggestions are seriously considered.

The year 1969 has been a year of change for all men. And so it may be for the Greek system. But change, where change is needed, can only bring improvement.

Pi Rho

A petitioning society of Delta Upsilon

Pi Rho fraternity, a petitioning society of Delta Upsilon national fraternity, was founded in the summer of 1968. The founding brothers were formerly members of Pershing Rifles, a military fraternity which disbanded locally last year.

Pi Rho selected DU because it is completely open racially and ethnically. Also, it is strong financially and has a strong, active alumni club. Furthermore, alumni members work closely with and participate actively in undergraduate chapters.

The Pi Rho's are looking for temporary housing. Before long, they hope to build a new house. DU national strongly encourages "big, beautiful" houses and has an average of $150,000 per chapter invested in houses. The Pi Rho's prefer to build, and hope to receive aid from DU as soon as their chapter is well-established.

But housing is not the only concern. Right now, the brothers are concentrating on developing a strong rush program to begin this fall. Moreover, they are working on a pledge program.

They feel that there should be no hierarchy as far as active-superior, pledge-inferior roles. Pledges attend the active meetings and have a voice in decisions. Their feeling is that pledging is a "learning together" experience. Finally,

Pi Rho is completely open as far as color or religion is concerned.

Delta Upsilon was founded nationally at Williams College in 1834, making it the sixth oldest national fraternity. DU was founded as a reaction to the secrecy emphasized in fraternities in the early 1800's. Men from several colleges gathered to found an order based on the ideals of justice, friendship, character, and liberal culture. And they chose the name Delta Upsilon, a translation of their motto "Justice, our foundation." Today, their colors of blue and gold are seen on nearly 100 campuses throughout the nation.

The job of establishing a chapter isn't easy, but it's being done eagerly. As one member remarked, "Right now, we're throwing out our grappling hooks."

Tau Kappa Gamma

A petitioning society of

Tau Delta Phi

One of two new fraternities on campus this year is Tau Kappa Gamma, a colony of Tau Delta Phi national fraternity.

Tau Kappa Gamma local was founded here on November 3, 1968. The seven charter members decided to petition for membership in a national just before Christmas. They met with officers of three nationals, and in mid-February they became a colony of Tau Delta Phi. TKG President Lenny Levy said that of the three nationals, Tau Delta would allow the local chapter to have more autonomy than the others.

The founders of TDG decided to start a new fraternity because they were "disenchanted with the present fraternity system." They had ideas about what a fraternity should be and decided to pursue these ideas. From the beginning, the seven members proclaimed a policy of judging everyone on merit and not on color or religion.

"The fact that we're a new fraternity helps us integrate more easily," said Levy. "We also felt that rather than giving the pledges hell, we should help them to know the brothers better and feel closer to the chapter."

At present, the chapter is looking for a temporary home, with plans to build a new house, with help from national in a year or two.

The brothers are also organizing an alumni association with area alumni.

The national Tau Delta Phi was founded at City College of New York in 1910. It is on an expansion program, and now has 36 chapters throughout the country.

Residences

Eight thousand people pour into the pillared brick buildings that dot the Hill, the high rises beyond Byrd, and the trailers hidden across Route 1. Each is different—varied backgrounds, interests and talents. The upperclassmen know what it's all about, but the freshmen wander aimlessly.

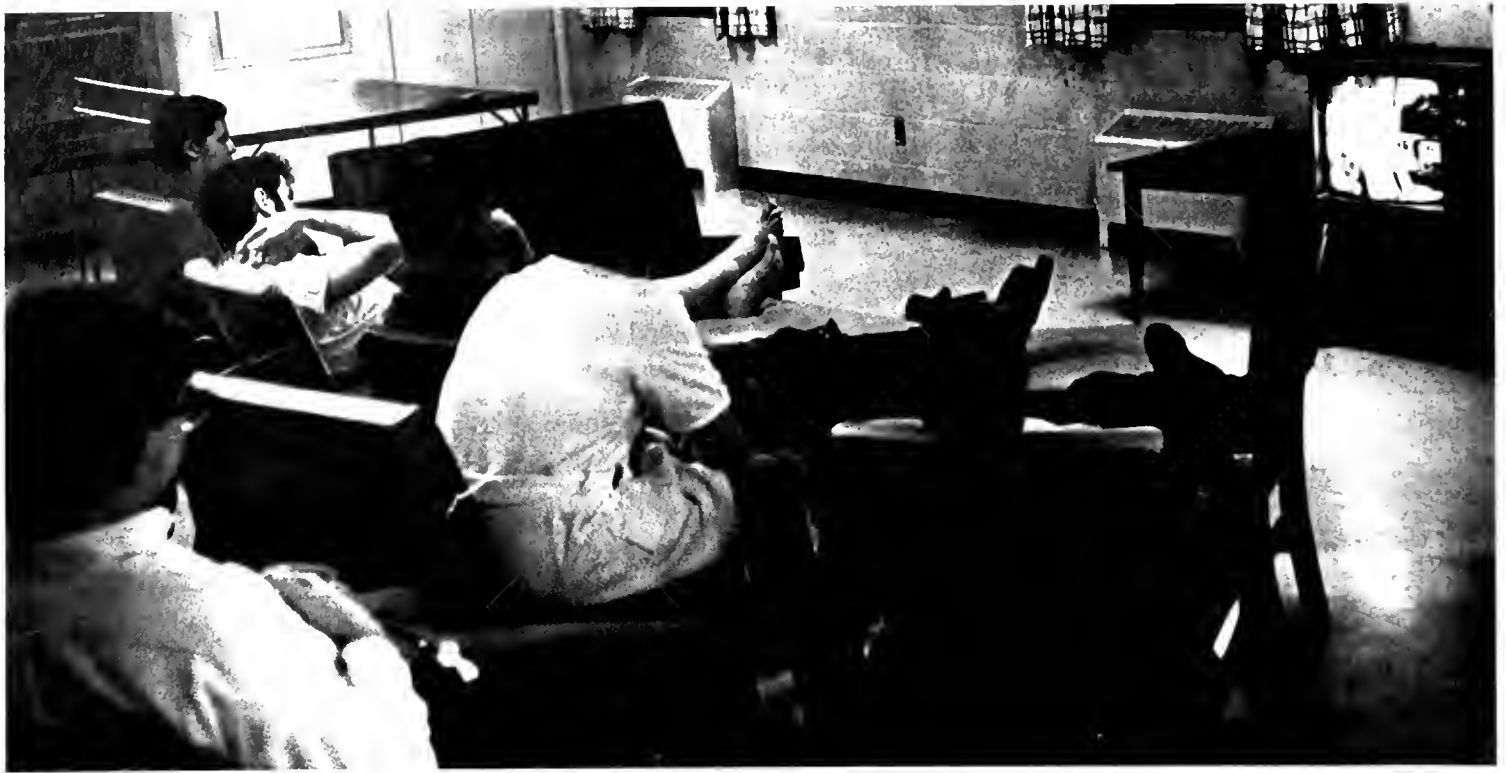

Fall means activities. A dessert. A powder puff football game. A beer blast. THE ICE IS BROKEN.

A big weekend approaches. A football game, a party. The first round of haulies also draws near. Search for a date. Highlight the pony for the Iliad. "Can you fix me up with your sister's roommate." Read 350 pages of G & P. The weekend's a blowout. So are the exams.

Getting to know the people who live around you. Football in the hall . . . a bonner for the first home game . . . an all night poker game . . . bull sessions . . . cries of "Let's hit the Grill." . . . lovers tying up the phones.

Fall comes and goes. A new semester begins and winter wears on. Housemothers lecture about porietal hours. Everyone gripes about the food. Darms brainstorm for ideas to fill the void.

This has been a year of change for the dorms. The RHA has been actively involved in this change. Parietal hours were finally instituted. Campus moles eagerly awaited hordes of crazed females storming the halls. But the orgies never happened. Later in the year the hated curfew was dropped for second semester sophomores. This also proved to be uneventful. The latest change involved security in women's residences. The Hill Area dorms that lacked alarm systems got night receptionists—male night receptionists. This program also appears to be successful.

It was also a year of turbulence for the RHA. Two controversies erupted this spring. The Housing Office's announcement that a portion of Corroll Hall would be turned into office space was met with widespread disapproval. A second debate arose concerning the possibility of making Cumberland a "coed" dorm. Students successfully argued that this building is virtually two separate dorms divided by a wall on each floor and would not be suitable. Another viewpoint was also successfully argued: namely that the university should not disrupt dorm life by proposing such changes without student feedback.

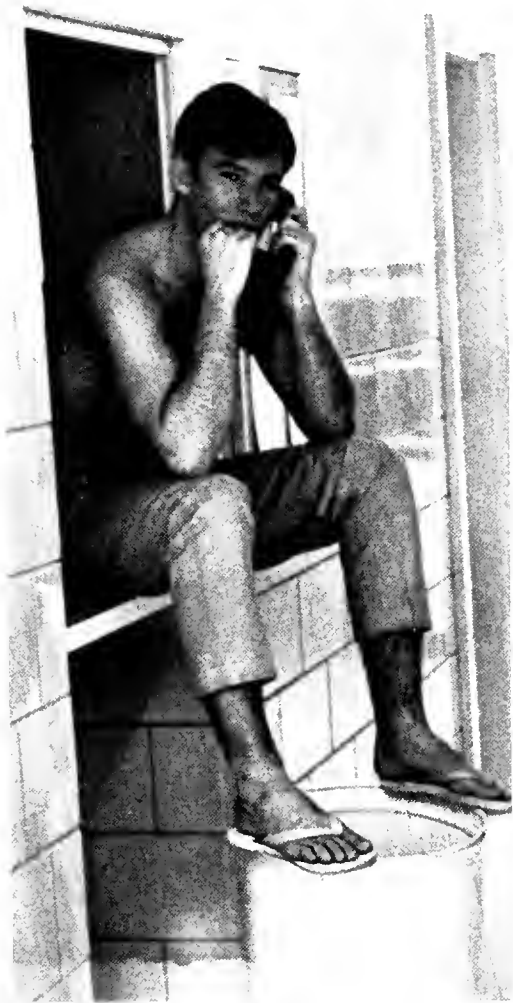

Changes are made in roommates. There are new quirks to get used to, and bad moods . . . twenty-first birthdays and engagements to savor . . . cigarettes to bum . . . confidences to share.

A dorm is a building and a room and things to do. But mostly it is people—people to like or not as you choose. It's hearing a familiar voice. Seeing a face in a crowd. It's a place to live. Later, it is mirroring each other's emotions, as people living together do. A dorm is laughter and anger and confusion—shared and scattered. It may seem empty at times. But in the end, a dorm is mostly people.

CAMBRIDGE

Creativity flew high in Cambridge Complex as dorms hung banners proclaiming Terp Power during the football season. Slogans ranged from "Go Terps" of Centreville gentility through more flamboyant, if somewhat pornographic epithets that sprung from Maryland's bout with the Gamecocks of South Carolina.

The warm fall weather brought out those with a flair for the dramatic. The moonlight escapades of the "nightly nudies" flourished. One October eve these hearty souls broke all previous records: six men made the grand tour and one ham remained onstage for four minutes and thirty seven seconds. These performances were met with cries of "bravo" and "ole".

Physical plant efforts to blanket the area in concrete flushed out those with a literary bent. The fertile imaginations of graffiti buffs were directed toward enshrining their pearls of wisdom for the edification of generations yet unborn.

Building on the legacy of the skylight artists of yesteryear Cambridge complex still nurtures artistic talent. Centreville Hall is the home of the annual art show—conventional perhaps—but popular.

Out of the depths of Cambridge D's basement came jazz, blues, and folk music. Cafe del Sol hums and throbs as campus troubadours offer something for everyone.

Even the dining hall has turned creative. The tone has changed from apathy to motherly interest with the advent of Mrs. Lillian McWilliams. Throwing an arm around a student's shoulder goes far to smooth over the upsetting effect of pepper steaks for the fifth time in one week. Takes a lot of creativity to mother 1500 students and one scraggly Christmas tree.

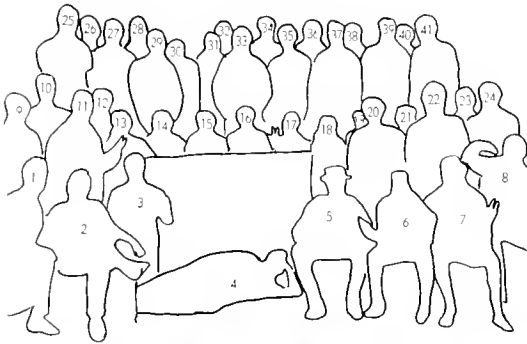

Beautiful Cambridge.

DENTON

Sometimes people on the Hill forget that the complexes exist . . . sometimes the complexes forget that anything past Byrd Stadium exists. As a matter of fact, the question that's been going around Denton is: "Is there really a university out there beyond the Byrd.

Denton, Easton, and Elkton comprise what is commonly known as Denton Complex. It's not hard to find—especially in the spring—they share "the beach" with President Elkins and Lot 1.

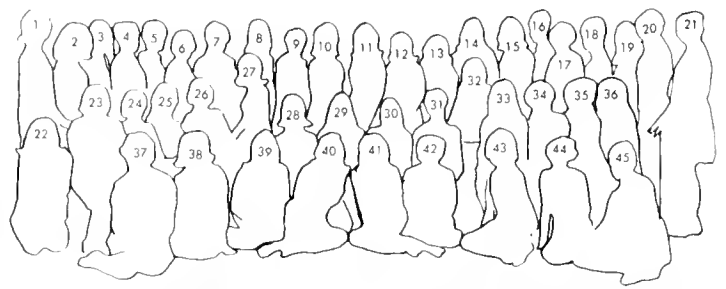

"I Eta Pi"—another new fraternity? No . . . It's the title of the latest literary work to come out of Easton B. In honor of George Washington's birthday the men of Easton created a poem and proceeded to honor each floor of Denton and Elkton with a cherry pie and a copy of I Eta Pi. They outdid themselves by hanging out cute signs on the side of the dorm, the contents of which are blipped from this writing. With proper gratitude, the girls of Denton's third floor sang Easton a thank you—also blipped.

Living so far from College Park—that Mecca of sensuous pleasure—Denton Area students must invent amusements for themselves. For instance, the conveyer belt in Dining Hall 4 is used as playground equipment. Some young gentleman picks up a fair damsel and tosses her on the conveyer, which spirits her off to parts unknown.

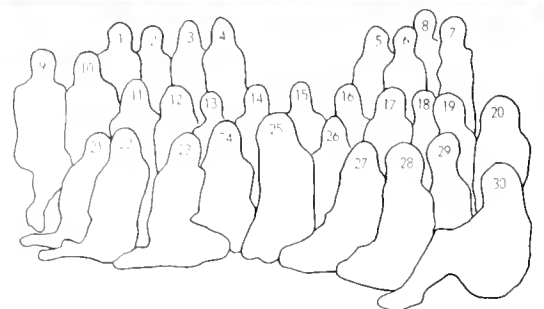

Denton is the middle sister of the complexes not the youngest or the oldest. Deserving attention, but seldom receiving her share.

ELLICOTT

Ellicott Area is the newest of the five. It is the childish pranks, and bubbling laughter, and adolescent problems that accompany youth—and this is good. Ellicott has no tradition to bind it—rather, it is building tradition.

Ellicott Hall opened two years ago. And a loud arrival it was. Furniture flew from the upper floors, complaints were promptly registered about their feathered neighbors that chose to crow at 6 A.M. A controversy brewed when the football team took over the seventh and eighth floors.

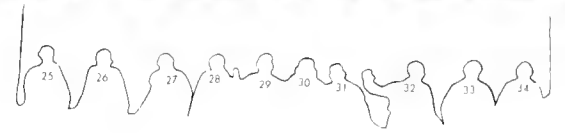

Last year Hagerstown Hall was opened and it was followed by the newest addition LaPlata, this fall. The presence of 1,000 women has done much to turn the attention of Ellicott men outward. The football team is well accepted, especially by the ladies. Hagerstown and LaPlata have devoted a lot of time to cheering the Terps on. Their efforts range from plastering the campus with leaflets to pulling fire alarms to get people out for a pep rally. But it's worth it. As one Hagerstown resident put it, "we get to eat with them in the off season." The presence of the team adds a vitality that is unequalled in the other areas.

LaPlata is having its fling, like the new girl in town. Except multiplied by 500. A newly discovered vein of gold. But the reign of glory will pass. The novelty will wear off—but in the meantime—who cares?

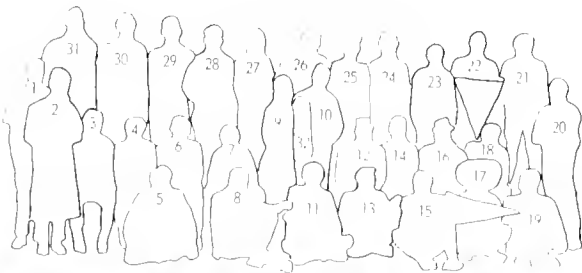

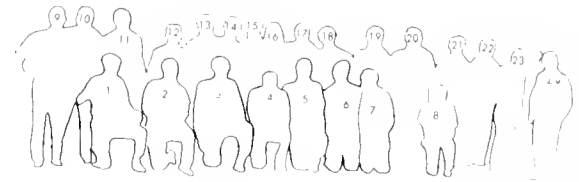

Ellicott is young and fresh. Ellicott swings.

The Fire Service dormitory is located on the second floor of the Fire Service Extension Building and is under the authority of the Fire Service Extension Dept. The dorm is sponsored by Dr. John L. Bryan, Professor and Head of the Fire Protection Curriculum.

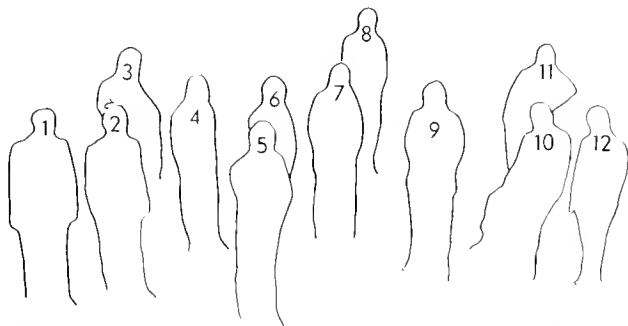

At the present time, the dormitory consists of twelve full time students enrolled in various curriculums. The purpose of the dormitory is to allow students who are interested in fire protection to "earn their room" by responding to emergencies with the College Park Volunteer Fire Department. All of the dorm's residents are required to maintain membership in the fire department while they are living in the dormitory.

The International House is a residence hall located on Knox Road behind Alleghany Hall. It is a two-story white house which resembles a private home. Residing in the house are twelve graduate students from all over the world. India, Biafra, Liberia, Korea, the West Indies, the Phillippines, Cuba, and Yugoslavia are the countries represented. The International House offers rich opportunities for cultural exchange between peoples from all over the world right here on campus.

THE HILL

White pillars, rolling expanses of grass, an aura of mellowness; these all exemplify THE HILL. But behind this tradition-bound facade lurk many hazards. As freshmen we looked upon our new home and said, "How beautiful." We had much to learn.

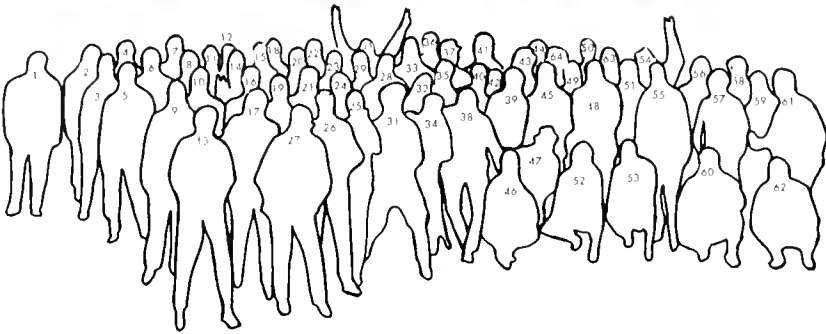

Alas—those white pillars were hollow, the grass mostly of the crab variety, and that aura of mellowness turned out to be rotting brick; but pride grew within us because the Hill is tradition and we were part of it.

Hill Area dorms radiate a warmth that is unequaled by any of the complexes—especially when it's in the low 90's outside. Many have found the heat just a little erratic: it goes full blast in May, but it's non-existent in December. We accepted this too, for it's all part of life on the Hill.

Most Hill Area residents have an extensive knowledge and skill in the ancient art of pest extermination. We have often found ourselves on a first name basis with the cockroaches and their relatives, who live with us in our homes. Hill Area dorms are a find to any dedicated zoology major in search of a victim.

The question often arises—"How can I get back at my roommate for that last blind date?" If you live on the Hill the answer is simple. Plan the attack for when your roomie is enjoying his shower. Then with three other guys, man the johns and let him have it. Fire 1! Fire 2! and Fire 3!—without the usual warning, "Flushing." This process uses up all of the available cold water. You will have your revenge and one slightly scalded roommate.

This makes up one aspect of life on the Hill. The Hill is tradition, complaints, warmth, and friendship all wrapped up into one. Maybe if we had known what was behind the white pillars, we would never have entered the dorm. But now that we're here—who's leaving? The Hill has personality.

THE MOBILE UNITS

The Mobile Units—a cheerful euphemism for the trailers east of Route 1 soon to be leaving the campus scene. This area's phase out began two years ago when Damascus Hall—the notorious “cardboard castle”—was evacuated. Despite the urgings of the RHA and the administration, the men are sad to see the end in sight. It's true that the “crackerboxes” are unsightly and inefficient. But something transcends this. Spirit. Unity. Sixty one trailers—sixty one islands of mirth and merriment—one hundred and twenty “suites”. Four guys instead of sixty. One-to-one relationships.

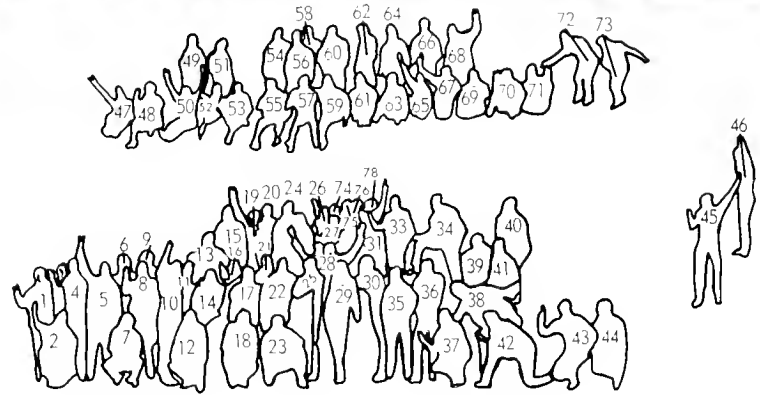

There's a novelty in trailer life. Like the maids. Who else on campus comes in after a long day of classes to find one of Maryland's crack domestic workers enthroned in the bathroom or in the rack, cutting a few Z's? Or take the simple matter of a phone call. Who else has to get dressed and run out in the rain to answer a wrong number? This arrangement can be a nuisance—but it also offers privacy—a commodity sometimes lacking in the dorms.

Some critics have gone so far to label the trailers “dumps”. But even this condition has its advantages. The male beast is able to put his building instinct to work. Varnishing, painting, designing, and restoring are a part of everyday living. Lounges are being redecorated and a barbecue pit is being built.

Yes—the trailers will soon be gone . . . and we will miss them.

Communications

Argus

Argus. What is that? Some kind of animal? No, Argus is a magazine. It is billed as the feature magazine of the University of Maryland—a publication published six times a year by students, for students. A feature, for the journalistically uninitiated, is a pictorial story with wide popular appeal and deeper inquiry than day to day news reporting. So Argus is, in effect, a mini Look magazine aimed at college people.

The general benefits of reading apply to Argus. New insight is found and horizons expand—entertainment is the product of finding new avenues of interest. If a publication is to succeed, all of these must be fulfilled. Argus has succeeded—last year it was cited as the nation's top collegiate feature magazine by Sigma Delta Chi, the national society for professional journalists.

It has not been easy though. This year Argus experienced the first mid-year change of a publications editor since 1958. A lack of recognition from the university population, along with a limited distribution brought about by a low budget have hampered the progress of Argus. Yet the person who ignores it is missing a good experience.

Calvert Review

As various organizations within the university struggle to meet the growing enrollment, the campus literary magazine, the Calvert Review, has increased its efforts to publish the best of prose, poetry, and essays written by university students.

Since its beginning in 1959 under the name "Expression", the Calvert Review has endeavored to bring to the student body a wide representation of valid artistic work in the field of creative writing. Determined to break through the student apathy barrier which in the past has handicapped the Calvert Review and the university at large, this year's staff has made numerous innovations to gain student interest and support. The traditional 2,500 copy run was increased to 3,500 for the winter issue of the magazine. Plans are being made for a 5,000 copy run of the spring issue. Additionally, the Calvert Review has offered prize money in each of its three fields for both semesters, rather than just the spring prize of past years.

With a firm belief in the ancient adage, "To have great artists there must be great audiences", the staff of the Calvert Review offers the opportunity for creative expression.

Course Guide

The Course Guide, only in its fourth year of publication, provides the campus community with an effective evaluation of professors and courses. By describing the content, structure, and loopholes of various courses, along with a summary of the hang-ups and idiosyncracies of many professors, the CG aids the student in selecting his class schedule.

All opinions presented in the Course Guide are based on interviews with students who have actually taken the course. The administration supplies the staff with lists of students, including addresses and telephone numbers, who have taken certain courses. The students whose names appear on these lists are then interviewed by CG workers. A written summary of these interviews appears in the Course Guide.

This year, for the first time, a spring addition of the Course Guide will be available. Also, an addition to the present methods of data collection, a computer tabulated questionnaire, developed by a resident graduate student in psychology, will be handed out to students during class. The numerical results of these questionnaires, along with the familiar interview results, will be presented in the expanded spring addition. Other innovations for the spring will include an in-depth interview with the professors.

Diamondback

Hard work and endless hours are the ingredients of one of America's top daily college newspapers – the Diamondback. With a new high circulation of 20,000 copies Monday through Friday. The Diamondback expanded its staff, equipment, and coverage, trying to include every facet of life at the University of Maryland during 1968-69. Diamondback staff members get professional experience from working with advertising, sales, news reporting, layout, and copy editing in a tightly organized operation.

The news department's growth and efficiency was illustrated on election night, when a massive coordinated effort by the staff produced the most up-to-date morning-after coverage of any comparable paper on the East Coast.

Editor-in-chief Steve Parks reorganized and decentralized the staff after the first semester resignation of managing editor Iro Allen.

Editor Parks also enlarged the editorial page layout. His endorsement of Richard Nixon was one of the big surprises of the year.

Surprise characterized much of the Diamondback's news. The pre-spring nude craze . . . the strength of the new Third Party in the SGA elections . . . The HEW desegregation order.

The sports department experienced one of the most exciting years in its history. A feud between Coach Bob Ward and Executive Sports Editor Dave Bourdon exemplified Ward's deteriorating relations with the college community which eventually led to a player revolt and the coach's resignation. Bourdon produced one of the year's most outstanding stories following Ward's departure: a three page examination of the Ward era.

The continued expansion of the paper's news coverage was reflected by the streamlining of the business side. Under Business Manager Tom Winer, total income soared to $145,000. Circulation went up to 20,000 copies daily – up 3,000 over 1967-68. Average number of pages increased from 12 to 15 per issue, with 144 issues published for the year. Winer also tightened controls on spending, instituting a formula which tied paper size to ad lineage and beginning daily billing.

This, then was the Diamondback for 1968-69 – a dynamic force on a restless campus.

Terrapin

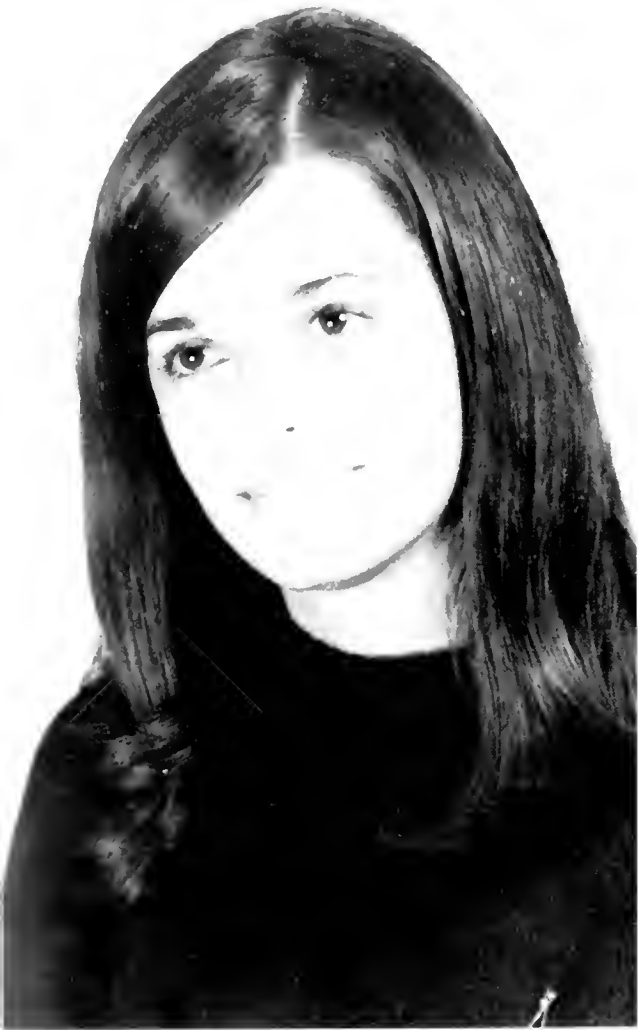

A yearbook's task is to see the past year in the eyes of the students and to set it down on paper. Capturing the year in 560 pages. Trying to decide what to include and what to cut can be a frustrating job. How can everything be done within the limits of time, money and human energy.

Since yearbooks tend to look alike, another problem arises. How can we be different? Hours of thought go into finding an interesting cover design or a fresh outlook on feature material.

Time is spent alone in a quest for something worthwhile. A photographer walks around campus looking for a picture that says it all. A feature writer sits over a typewriter reworking a new idea. And someone sits in an empty office making cryptic drawings that will eventually become a layout.

But the people who work on a yearbook are not separate islands of imagination. They are a group, working together toward a common goal. It's more than a sharing of ideas. The French call it esprit de corps and camaraderie. It ranges from foul moods at three A.M. before a deadline to laughter over that latest joke. Beyond the creativity of the individual, it's the dirty work that everyone shares.

The year passes quickly and soon it's all done. While the books are being finished, work on the book for next year starts. But one spring day everything stops. The Terrapin is delivered. Anticipation reaches a climax as the editor picks up the book. As pages are flipped there is a feeling of growing pride—and a touch of sadness that it's over.

WMUC

Entering its twenty-fifth year of service to the university, WMUC, campus radio, has expanded both its staff and programming to meet the needs of an ever-growing university.

This past summer, a unique automation system was installed in the WMUC studios in building FF. The automation provides popular album sides and campus oriented announcements during the hours when live broadcasting is not taking place.

WMUC has also constructed a new transmission system in a large portion of the Hill Area, which was made necessary by an FCC visit to campus in early October. The inspector found that WMUC was illegally propagating its signals through the air and was being picked up as far away as Laurel and downtown Washington. Consequently, the station's chief engineer, Russ Brown, designed and built a more efficient transmission system.

During semester break, cables were laid and transmitters made operational in the Grahm Cracker area, thus giving WMUC coverage to most of the fraternities and sororities.

Next on the list of priorities, is a transmitter for the university's newest dorm, LoPlato Hall. This should be completed in the spring, thus giving the station 100% campus coverage.

This year has brought some important changes in the WMUC programming schedule. On a normal weekday, the live sign-on is at 6:30 A.M. and primarily top forty music continues until 8:00 P.M., at which time a freewheeling personality show is presented. This consists of a smattering of many kinds of music. Following the 10:55 sports report, is Underground CPM, a showcase for new and progressive rock sounds. Then, the hours between 1:30 and 6:30 in the morning are covered by the WMUC Music Machine, the automated system.

WMUC broadcasts events from where they happen. For example, the station has broadcasted SGA election from the Student Union, the IF Sing and the Miss Maryland pageant from Ritchie, and important student-faculty meetings from wherever they may occur.

In the future, WMUC plans more comprehensive news and features, a move to more modern studios, and more campus involvement projects to better serve the student of the University of Maryland.

M Book

The M-Book serves as the handbook for all new university students by presenting essential information about all phases of university life including activities, organizations, services, and "happenings". There are also comprehensive sections covering honoraries and the Student Government Association. This year a new section called "Did You Know?" was added. Included in this section are typical questions that new students ask. Such queries as "Is English 001 a flunk-out course?" and "Am I really just a number here?" are answered. The M-Book is distributed to new students during the Summer Orientation Program and registration. The staff for M-Book is formed during the fall and actual work begins during the spring semester.

The Concert Band is a group of approximately seventy musicians selected from the membership of the Varsity Band. The Concert Band gives a formal concert during March, and an outdoor concert in May. It also participates in reading clinics given for public school directors.

Concert Band

Composed of approximately 100 male performers, the Marching Band presents pre-game and half-time shows at each home football game and at one or more out-of-town games. The membership of the Marching Band is not separate from other groups in the University Band program but overlaps membership in the three concert bands, and operates concurrently with the concert group during football season. The Maryland Marching Band represents the finest in quality entertainment for major college football, and since great emphasis is placed upon music as well as marching, special arrangements are prepared, and the fine instrumentalists in the University Band program are utilized in developing a full and balanced ensemble sound for outdoors.

Marching Band

A select Symphony Band is organized at the beginning of the school year with a balanced instrumentation currently numbering seventy-five players. The Symphony Band presents a formal concert on campus in January, embarks on an annual tour during Registration Week in February, holds a recording session in February, presents formal concerts in April and May, and performs at other functions such as the annual President's Convocation in the Cale Building, reading clinics of new music for public school directors, and single evening concerts in various communities as an addendum to its annual tour.

Symphony Band

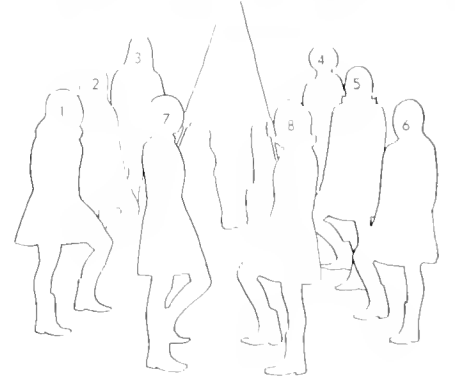

The university Varsity Band is a large concert performing organization which provides an opportunity for students not members of the select Symphony Band to participate on a full year basis. It provides a place for all students who have had high school instrumental training to continue music education in college regardless of chosen areas of study at the university level.

WHEN YOU'RE OUT OF SCHLITZ---- PUNT !!

Editor's Note

1969 was a good year, a full year, and my last year at the University of Maryland. I look on this TERRAPIN as my farewell and my memories. It has 560 pages of work, tears—both of joy and disappointment, and it has been 560 thrilling experiences.

My staff was excellent. They worked late, long, and faithfully. Without their confidence, enthusiasm, and plain hard work, there would have been no TERRAPIN. So it is to each and every one of them that I say Thank you, Congratulations, and the best of luck next year. To Mr. Geraci, TERRAPIN advisor, I can only repeat—Thank you, Thank you, Thank you. And I owe special thanks to my newly wed husband, Richard, for putting up with all those late night deadlines, to my mother for her sympathy, and to Dr. Wright, my advisor and friend, for giving me the support to remain at Maryland and to finish this book.

We tried to have the TERRAPIN emphasize the change that has taken place on Maryland's campus this year. Change has also been the guideword for creating the 1969 TERRAPIN.

We have more color than ever before, more special effects, and just plain more. The book was increased to 18,000 copies, making us by far the largest yearbook in the country. Our actual size increased almost a hundred pages—we gave more individual coverage to Residences, Greeks, Commuters, Sports, and feature.

Our senior section is my pride and joy. It is, for once, one of the more attractive portions of the book. Delmo Studios, our professional photographers, did a quality job, photographing more seniors than ever before.

We grouped the Residence Halls by areas and attempted a story on each, each area being written up by one of its residents. To spark ingenuity, a $25.00 prize was offered to both the Residence Hall and Greek house which exhibited the most original pose. Our winners, selected by Elaine Williams, Journalism secretary, and Mr. Geraci, TERRAPIN advisor, were Lo Plata 1 and Lambda Chi Alpha. We were most pleased with everyone's cooperation and feel it helped add much to the book.

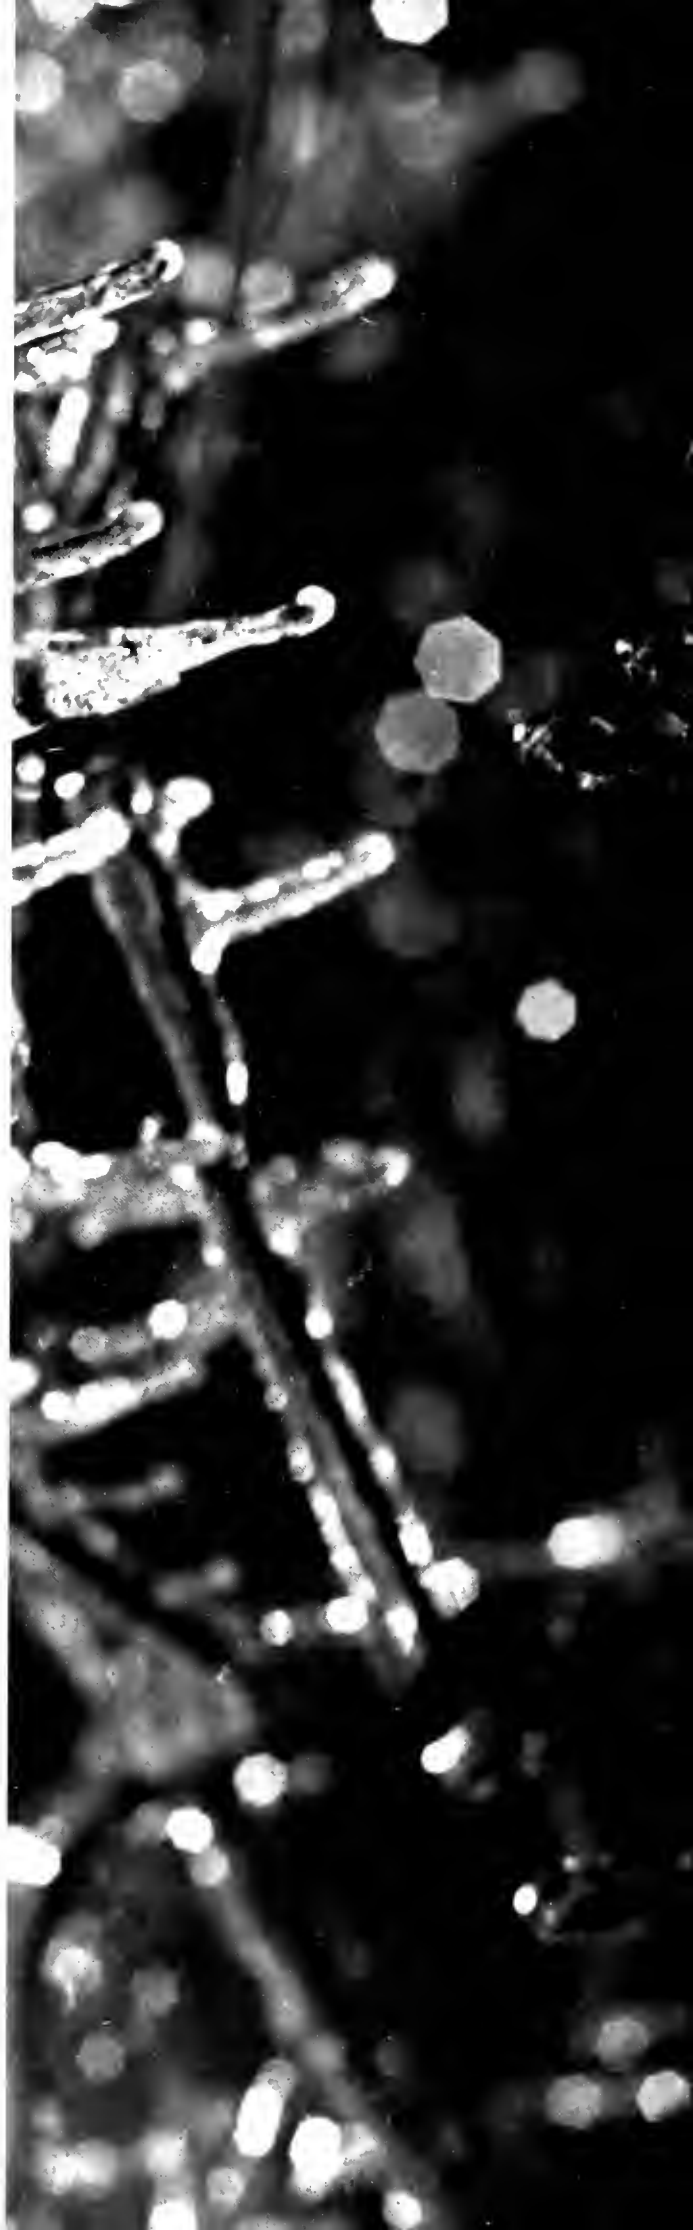

This year the bulk of the book is printed on 80 lb. Dull Enamel paper with the senior section on 70 lb. Stiple Tone. The headline type style is Bodoni, the body type is Sporton Book Condensed. Our seniors and group photographer was Delmo Studios of New York, represented by Bill McIntyre. The cover, designed by Richard Clark, was manufactured by Kingskraft (Kingsport Press, Inc.) in Kingsport, Tennessee.

We have put all our ideas and all our efforts into these 560 pages. We only hope that each of you will find a memory or more; we hope that you will enjoy and appreciate the 1969 TERRAPIN as much as the staff did producing it.
